פסוק א

Deuteronomy 32:1

הָאֲזִינוּ הַשָּׁמַיִם וְאֶדְבָּרָה וְתִשְׁמַע הָאָרֶץ אִמְרֵי־פִי:

Give ear, ye heavens, and I will speak; And let the earth hear the words of my mouth.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:1:1

Give ear, heavens, and I will speak, etc. First, we must examine why Moshe said, "and I will speak" (וְאֶדְבָּרָה), rather than phrasing it as, "Give ear, heavens, to my words."

הָאֲזִינוּ הַשָּׁמַיִם וְגו'. יֵשׁ לְהַעִיר רֵאשׁוֹנָה לְמָה אָמַר "וְאֶדְבָּרָה", וְלֹא אָמַר עַל זֶה הַדָּבָר "הָאֲזִינוּ הַשָּׁמַיִם וְדַבֵּר".

Second, why did he not group them together and say, "Give ear, heavens and earth," or, "Hear, heavens and earth"?

ב' לְמָה לֹא כָלֵל אוֹתָם יַחַד וַיֹּאמֶר "הָאֲזִינוּ הַשָּׁמַיִם וְהָאָרֶץ", אוֹ "שְׁמַעוּ שָׁמַיִם וָאָרֶץ":

Third, why does Moshe use haazana, "giving ear," when he addresses the heavens, but shemiah, "hearing," when he addresses the earth? What accounts for the change in wording?

ג' לְמָה לְשָׁמַיִם אָמַר לְשׁוֹן הָאֲזָנָה וְלָאָרֶץ אָמַר לְשׁוֹן שְׁמִיעָה:

Fourth, why did he address the heavens with a direct command, "Give ear" (הָאֲזִינוּ), while addressing the earth in the third person, "and let the earth hear" (וְתִשְׁמַע), when he should have said, "and hear, O earth" (וְשָׁמְעֵי הָאָרֶץ)?

ד' לְמָה לְשָׁמַיִם אָמַר לְשׁוֹן צִוִּי "הָאֲזִינוּ" לְנוֹכַח, וְלָאָרֶץ אָמַר "וְתִשְׁמַע" שֶׁהִיא לוֹ לֹאמַר "וְשָׁמְעֵי הָאָרֶץ":

Fifth, why did he use the term "and I will speak" (וְאֶדְבָּרָה) for the heavens, which denotes harsh speech (דְּבִיר קָשָׁה), while using "the words of my mouth" (אִמְרֵי פִי) for the earth, which denotes soft, gentle expression (אֲמִירָה רַכָּה)?

ה' לְמָה לְשָׁמַיִם אָמַר "וְאֶדְבָּרָה" דְּבִיר קָשָׁה וְלָאָרֶץ אָמַר "אִמְרֵי פִי" אֲמִירָה רַכָּה:

Sixth, why was he precise to say "the words of my mouth" (אֲמָרִי) rather than simply saying "my words" (אָמַר)?

ו' לָמָּה דִּקְדָּק לומר "אֲמָרִי כִּי" וְלֹא אָמַר "אָמַרִי":

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:1:2

I have seen that Chazal in the Sifrei said: Because Moshe was close to heaven, he said, "Give ear, heavens," whereas Yeshayahu, who was far from heaven, said, "Hear, O heavens" (Yeshayahu 1:2). According to their words, some of these questions about the wording are resolved, but not all of them.

וְרֵאִיתִי לְרַבּוֹתֵינוּ וְכוּנָם לְבָרְכָה (בספרי) שֶׁאָמְרוּ: מֹשֶׁה שֶׁהָיָה קָרוֹב לַשָּׁמַיִם אָמַר "הֶאֱזִינוּ הַשָּׁמַיִם" וְיִשְׁעִיָּה שֶׁהָיָה רָחוֹק מִן הַשָּׁמַיִם אָמַר "שִׁמְעוּ שָׁמַיִם" (ישעיה א:ב), עַד כָּאן. וְלִדְבָרֵהֶם נִתְּשָׁבוּ קִצָּת מִהִדְקְדוּקִים, לֹא כָּלֶם.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:1:3

The Ohr HaChaim now offers another approach. First, we need to understand the word haazinu, "give ear." It can describe two different situations. It can mean "bend your ear toward me," or it can address an ear already close to the speaker.

וְחוּץ מִדֶּרֶכָם נִרְאָה לומר, וְקוֹדֵם נִשְׁכַּל עַל דְּבַר מִשְׁמַעוֹת תִּיכַת "הֶאֱזִינוּ", וְהִנֵּה הֵיא סוֹבֵלֶת שְׁנֵי דְרָכִים: אֶחָד, הִטָּה אָזְנוֹ, וְהַשְׁנִי, תִּאֲזִין אֲזִנָּה.

According to the first interpretation, it indicates that the listener is far away and must bend his ear in order to hear, for without bending his ear, he would be unable to hear.

לְדֶרֶךְ הָרֵאשׁוֹן יִגִּיד שֶׁהַשּׁוֹמֵעַ רָחוֹק וְצָרִיךְ לְהִטּוֹת אָזְנוֹ כְּדִי שִׁיּוּכַל לְשִׁמּוֹעַ, שֶׁכֵּן לֹא הִטִּית אָזְנוֹ אִינוּ יָכוֹל לְשִׁמּוֹעַ.

In the second reading, the listener is already so close to the speaker that he can be addressed directly with "give ear." This is the reading Chazal chose when they described Moshe as close to heaven.

וְלְדֶרֶךְ הַשְּׁנִי יִגִּיד שֶׁכָּל כֹּה אֵין הַשּׁוֹמֵעַ קָרוֹבָה לַמִּשְׁמַע שֶׁלֹּא אָמַר הָאֵזֶן. וְדֶרֶךְ זֶה בּוֹ בִּפְחוּרֵי חֲזוֹל.

The word also allows the first reading, however, and the wording does not force us to choose between them. The Ohr HaChaim therefore develops the first reading, in which the listener must lean in from a distance. He will use it to answer all the questions raised at the beginning.

וְכִינוֹן שֶׁהַמִּלָּה סוֹבֵלֶת גַּם כֵּן דֶּרֶךְ הָרֵאשׁוֹן, וְאִין הֶכְרַע, אֵינוּ נִלְךָ בּוֹ, וּבָזָה יִתְּשָׁבוּ כָּל הִדְקְדוּקִים עַל נִכוֹן.

Although the earlier Sages chose another interpretation, the Torah has seventy faces, as the Ohr HaChaim has already explained (Bamidbar Rabbah 13:16). In Aggadah, the Torah's non-halachic teachings, another interpretation may differ from theirs, provided the disagreement is not in a matter of halachah. Here there is an additional reason to offer another reading: as he will soon explain, both readings can fit the same pasuk.

והגם שקדמונינו בחרו דרך אחר, כבר
אמרנו ששבעים פנים לתורה (במדבר רבה
יג, טז), ובענין האגדה יכולים לפרש הגם
שהיה הפרוש מנגד לדבריהם כל שאין
הנגוד בדבר הלכה, ומה גם שיש לנו
להסביל שני הדרכים בפסוק כאשר אבאר
בסמוך:

Now, the path by which we resolve all the questions about the wording is as follows: Since the heavens are physically high above, in accordance with the plain meaning of the matter, Moshe called upon them to bend their ear, saying to them, "Give ear" (האזינו), meaning: bend your ear to hear my words.

הנה הדרך שאנו משבים בו כל הדקדוקים
הוא על זה הדרך, לפי שהשמים הם
עליונים כפשוט הענין, לזה קרא להם משה
שישו אונם, ואמר להם "האזינו", פרוש
הטו אונכם לשמע דברי,

But to the earth, he said, "and let the earth hear" (ותשמע), meaning it will hear on its own without bending an ear. This is because the earth stands directly before him, and is close enough to hear the very articulation of the speech coming out of his mouth. This is why he said, "the words of my mouth" (אמרי פי), because the earth is so close to him.

ולארץ אמר "ותשמע", פרוש מעצמה
בלא הטיית און, כי לפניו היא עומדת,
ויכולה לשמע חתוך המאמר היוצא מפיו,
והוא אמרו "אמרי פי", להיותה כל כך
קרובה אצלו.

Through this approach, we gain a resolution to all the questions about the wording. Since one listener is far and the other is near, Moshe divided his call to each one in the manner appropriate for them.

ולדרך זה הרוחנו לשוב כל הדקדוקים, כי
לפי שאחד רחוק ואחד קרוב, לזה חלק
ההערה לכל אחד כפי הראוי לו.

To the distant one (the heavens), he called to bend its ear, and undertook upon himself to call out in a loud voice, which is the meaning of "and I will speak" (וַאֲדַבֶּרָה, implying strong, loud speech). To the near one (the earth), he called out in the manner appropriate for it, indicating that he would speak to it as well, but it does not require a loud shout; rather, it will hear on its own, even without a loud voice, simply by hearing the articulation of the letters directly from his mouth.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:1:7

Through this path, we can also resolve the words of Yeshayahu, who said, "Hear, O heavens, and give ear, O earth" (Yeshayahu 1:2). He attributed "hearing" to the heavens, even though they were far from him, and "giving ear" (bending the ear) to the earth, even though it was close.

The reason for this is as Yeshayahu himself concluded: "for Hashem has spoken." This means the reason he ordered them in this way is because it is Hashem Who spoke. Relative to the Speaker, Who is Hashem, the heavens are closer, as it is written, "The heavens are heavens for Hashem" (Psalms 115:16), and it is written, "The heaven is My throne, and the earth is My footstool" (Yeshayahu 66:1). Therefore, Yeshayahu said, "Hear, O heavens" to what Hashem spoke, because they do not need to bend their ear; but "give ear, O earth," because being far from Him, the earth must bend its ear to hear.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:1:8

Perhaps both interpretations of the word "Give ear" (הֶאֱזִינוּ) are correct, in the following manner: Relative to the physical mouth of Moshe that articulates the letters, the meaning is as we have explained (that the heavens are far and must bend their ear).

לְרַחוֹק קָרָא שְׁיִטָּה אֲזִינוּ, וְהִתְנָה עַל עֲצָמוֹ

בְּדַבְּרִינוּ,

But relative to his soul, which is spiritual, the meaning is in accordance with the words of Chazal. The text itself supports this, for it was regarding Moshe's soul that Chazal said (Sifrei Ha'azinu 1) that he was close to heaven. His physical self, however, spoke on the earth, and one cannot deny physical reality.

וּבְעֶרְךָ נִשְׁמָתוֹ שֶׁהִיא הָרוּחָנִיּוֹת תְּהִיָּה

הַמּוֹחַשׁ.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:1:9

Furthermore, Moshe intended to speak to the two components from which man is constructed: one is the spiritual part, which is referred to by the name "heavens," and the other is the physical part, which is referred to by the name "earth." This is similar to what Chazal alluded to (Sanhedrin 91b) on the verse, "He calls to the heavens from above, etc." (Psalms 50:4).

עוֹד נִתְכַּוֵּן שֶׁדַּבֵּר עִם שְׁנֵי הָרִכְבוֹת שֶׁמֶהֶם
בְּנוֹי הָאָדָם, אֶחָד חֶלֶק הָרוּחָנִי שִׁתְיָחַס

לְבָרְכָה (סנהדרין צא:) בַּפֶּסוּק "קְרָא אֶל
הַשָּׁמַיִם מֵעַל" וְגו' (תהלים נ:ד).

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:1:10

When he spoke to the spiritual aspect within man, he called to it and said, "Give ear, heavens." This means the heavenly parts of man, which are hidden in secret, are called upon to bend their ear. To this aspect, he spoke with strong words (דְּבוֹר קָשָׁה), because the soul can bear the authority of the Creator's demands, as it recognizes its spiritual obligation.

וְכִשְׁדַּבֵּר לְרוּחָנִיּוֹת שֶׁבָּאָדָם קָרָא אֵלָיו
וְאָמַר "הֶאֱזִינוּ הַשָּׁמַיִם", פְּרוּשׁ, חֶלְקִי
הַשָּׁמַיִם שֶׁלְּהִיוֹתָם טְמוּנִים בְּנִסְתָּר, לְזֶה
קָרָאם לְהֶאֱזִין, וְאָמַר בְּנִגְדוֹ דְּבוֹר קָשָׁה, כִּי
הַנֶּפֶשׁ תִּסְבּוֹל מְרוֹת בְּעִנְיֵי הַבּוֹרָא, כִּי
תִּכְפֹּר חַיּוּבָה.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:1:11

But to the body, which is revealed, he said, "and let the earth hear," meaning the earthly parts of man. To this physical aspect, he spoke "the words of my mouth," because the body, by its physical nature, is far from intellectual and spiritual concepts, and therefore requires gentle words (אֲמִירָה רַכָּה) to be receptive to hearing.

וְכַנְגֵּד הַגּוֹף שֶׁהוּא בְּנִגְלָה, אָמַר "וְתִשְׁמַע
הָאָרֶץ", פְּרוּשׁ, חֶלְקִי הָאָרֶץ, "אֲמַר פִּי", כִּי
הַגּוֹף לְהִיוֹת טָבַעוֹ רְחוּק מִהַמְשַׁכְּלוֹת צָרִיךְ
אֲמִירָה רַכָּה לְשִׁמְעוֹ.

Moshe also intended to speak to the different groups within Yisrael: first, their leaders and great figures; second, the masses of the people who do not hold prominent titles.

He referred to the leaders by the name "heavens," because they are on a high spiritual level. He addressed them first with the command, "Give ear, heavens." After that, he said, "and let the earth hear," meaning that the masses, who are compared to the "earth," will hear on their own when they see their leaders walking on the proper path. This is as the Sages of blessed memory said in the Zohar (Part II, 36a): "If the head of the nation is corrected, the whole nation is corrected."

עוד נתכוון לדבר עם הדרגות הנמצאים
בישראל: אחד הם גדולייהם וראשיהם, ב'
המה המון העם שאין להם שם בעם.

וכנה לגדולים בשם שמים שהם במדרגה

לארץ, כשיראו גדולייהם הולכים בדרך
נכון, וכאמרו זכרונם לברכה (זוהר חלק
ב לו.) וזה לשונם: אי רישא דעמא אתתקון
כולא אתתקון.

There is another hint here. By giving ear to Torah, people themselves can become worthy of the name "heavens." On this reading, haazinu means: listen, and through that listening you become like the heavens.

This follows the idea of "I said, you are elohim" (Tehillim 82:6), a description of human spiritual stature. The Ohr HaChaim refers to his longer explanation in Bereishis: through righteous deeds, even physical matter can be transformed into spiritual form; through wicked deeds, spiritual form can be reduced to mere matter. For clarity, "matter" and "form" here contrast the physical side of a person with the spiritual character that shapes it. His point is that our deeds can raise the physical toward the spiritual, or pull the spiritual downward.

עוד ירמוז: אם יאזינו דברי תורה אז יהיו
נקראים שמים, והוא אמרו "האזינו" – בזה
אתם נחשבים שמים,

על דרך אמרו (תהלים פב:) "אני אמרתי
אלהים אתם", וכמו שהארחנו בפךרשת
בראשית, שעל ידי מעשה הצדיקים גם
החמר מהפכים אותו ועושים אותו צורה,
ועל ידי מעשה הרשעים מהפכים הצורה
לחמר.

We have already established that spiritual form is referred to by the name "heavens," and physical matter is referred to by the name "earth." When Moshe said, "and I will speak" (וְאָדַבְרָה), implying harsh speech, he meant: do not only listen during times of goodness, but even when I speak harshly in rebuke for sin, you must still give ear.

וּכְבֹּר אֶמְרָנוּ כִּי הַצֹּרֶה תִּתְיַחַס בְּשֵׁם שָׁמַיִם,
וְהַחוּמָּר יִתְיַחַס בְּשֵׁם אֶרֶץ. וְאָמְרוּ
"וְאָדַבְרָה", פָּרוּשׁ, לֹא בְשָׁעַת הַטּוֹבָה לְבַד
תִּאֲזִינוּ, אֲלָא אֶפְלוּ בְשָׁעָה שֶׁיִּדְבֵּר קִשּׁוֹת
בְּתוֹכָהֶן עַל עֶזְרֵן צָרִיכִין לְהֶאֱזִין.

And when he said, "and let the earth hear the words of my mouth," he meant that even after the soul departs from the body, leaving only the physical element of the "earth," even then, this earth will hear the words of my mouth.

וְאָמְרוּ וְתִשְׁמַע הָאָרֶץ וגו'. פָּרוּשׁ, שֶׁאֶפְלוּ
אַחֵר פְּרִדַּת הַנֶּפֶשׁ מִהַגּוּף וְתִשְׁאַר בְּחִינַת
הָאָרֶץ לְבִדְהָ, אַף עַל פִּי כֵן תִּשְׁמַע הָאָרֶץ
אִמְרֵי פִי.

He explains this through a passage in the Zohar Chadash, Bereishis, on "Let there be lights." It describes a future heavenly voice calling at every grave marker: "Go out and see. Come out from beneath the worn covering of dust, and awaken from your sleep, daughters of Tzion." The passage connects Tzion with a tziyun, a grave marker, as in "What is this marker?" (II Melachim 23:17). For clarity, this wordplay identifies the sleepers being summoned as those lying in the graves. This concludes the cited passage.

פָּרוּשׁ, עַל דֶּרֶךְ אֶמְרָם בְּסִפְרֵי הַזֶּהר (זהר
חדש בראשית בפסוק "וַיֹּאמֶר אֱלֹהִים יְהִי
מֵאֵרֶת") וְזֶה לְשׁוֹנוֹ: "צִיּוֹנָה וְרֵאיוֹנָה" וגו',
עֲתִידָה בֵּת קוֹל לְאַתְעָרָא בְּכָל צִיּוֹנָא
וְצִיּוֹנָא גְבֻתִי קִבְרֵי וְאוֹמְרֵת "צִיּוֹנָה

כָּאן.

This is the promise that Hashem makes to the righteous: that their physical bodies will hear His call even after they have returned to the earth, which is the meaning of "and let the earth hear the words of my mouth." From the inverse of this statement, you learn that one who does not give ear to the word of Hashem in life, his body resting in the earth will not hear that calling voice, and his dust will not be awakened at the resurrection.

הוּא הַמְאָמֵר שֶׁמִּבְטִיחַ ה' לְצַדִּיקִים שֶׁיִּשְׁמַע

אַתָּה לְמַד שֶׁמִּי שֶׁלֹּא יֵאֲזִין דְּבַר ה' לֹא
יִשְׁמַע גּוֹפּוֹ הַשּׁוֹכֵן בְּאֶרֶץ אֵת קוֹל הַכְּרוֹז
הַהוּא וְלֹא יִהְיֶה עֶפְרוֹ נִנְעָר.

בפשוט · In plain words

The Ohr HaChaim begins with six questions about the different ways Moshe addresses heaven and earth. His first approach reads the contrast in terms of physical distance: heaven must lean in to hear Moshe, while the earth is close enough to hear his words directly. He then shows how this can coexist with Chazal's reading that Moshe's soul is close to heaven. Other readings address the soul and body, and then the leaders and the rest of the people. A final reading teaches that listening to Torah, including rebuke, can raise a person's physical life toward the spiritual. He connects that listening with the future call that awakens the righteous from the earth.

למעשה · Lemaaseh

When a Torah teaching challenges something we are doing, pause before dismissing it. The Ohr HaChaim on this pasuk says that giving ear includes listening to rebuke, even when the words are hard to hear. One practical step is to identify what the teaching asks us to reconsider, and give that point our full attention.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:2:1

"May my teaching fall like rain." The Ohr HaChaim begins with the teaching in Pirkei Avos 3:17, "If there is no flour, there is no Torah." Flour stands for the livelihood that enables a person to learn.

יֵעָרֵף כַּמָּטָר לִקְחֵי. פְּרוּשׁ, עַל דֶּרֶךְ אֲמָרָם
זְכוּנָם לְבִרְכָּה (אבות ג, יז) "אִם אֵין קֶמַח
אֵין תּוֹרָה" וְכוּ',

Just as Hashem sends rain to feed and sustain us, we are called upon to learn Torah. Moshe's comparison asks that Torah flow from our mouths in response to the rain Hashem provides. The pasuk can thus be read: let My teaching fall, just as I cause the rain to fall. The comparison is between the drops of rain Hashem sends and the words of Torah we speak.

The Ohr HaChaim explains that Hashem first prepares a person's livelihood and then asks him to learn Torah. Material support makes that learning possible.

Consequently, you learn from this matter that if they do not drop words of Torah from their mouths, Hashem has no desire to give rain.

This also explains the Ohr HaChaim's reading of "If there is no flour, there is no Torah" (Pirkei Avos 3:17). He reads it as a conclusion one can draw: when the flour is missing, the Torah is missing. In this reading, a lack of sustenance points back to a lack of Torah learning.

The reason the verse refers to the study of Torah with the term "ya'arof" (shall drop) is to compare it to the action of rain, which drops down.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:2:2

Alternatively, the verse hints that just as the withholding of rain causes death to man, so too the withholding of Torah will break him (from the root "arof," to break the neck). He connects this warning to Yeshayahu 1:19 to 20, which contrasts willingness to obey with refusal, and warns that refusal leads to the sword.

The verse repeats itself using different terms, "likchi" (My teaching) and "imrati" (My speech), corresponding to the two Torahs: the Written Torah and the Oral Torah.

וְכָפַל לומר בְּמִלּוֹת שׁוֹנוֹת "לְקַחִי

וְתּוֹרָה שֶׁבְּעַל פֶּה.

Likchi, "My teaching," refers to the Written Torah, which Hashem handed to Moshe, written with the finger of Elokim. Although the direct gift was the Aseres HaDibros, the Ten Commandments, everything written in the Torah is included within them. The Ohr HaChaim cites the Zohar, volume 2, 93b, for this point.

And corresponding to the Oral Torah, it says "imrati" (My speech), which refers to matters that were transmitted by word of mouth, from mouth to mouth.

The verse compares the Written Torah to rain and the Oral Torah to dew. This is because the Written Torah is the primary foundation and root of everything, whereas the Oral Torah consists of the applications and fine details that are not explicitly stated in the Written Torah but are only hinted at. This is the concept the verse employs in its metaphor, comparing the Written Torah to rain, which is the foundation and primary source of everything, and the Oral Torah to dew, which sustains and preserves what the rain has produced, just as the Oral Torah does for the Written Torah.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:2:3

He offers another reading based on the teaching of the masters of the Torah's inner wisdom, cited in Be'er Heitev, Orach Chaim 238, in the name of the Arizal. In this teaching, the time for learning the Written Torah is the day, rather than the night.

כַּנְגִיד תּוֹרָה שֶׁבְּכֶתֶב אָמַר "לְקַחִי" שֶׁהִיא
נִתְּנָה מִיָּד לְיָד מִשָּׁה כְּתוּבָה בְּאֶצְבָּע

הַדְּבָרוֹת, בָּהֶם כָּלֹוִלִים כָּל מֵה שֶׁכְּתוּב
בְּסֵפֶר הַתּוֹרָה כְּמֵאמָרָם זְכוּרָנָם לְבִרְכָּה
(וְזוֹהַר חֶלֶק ב צג:).

וְכַנְגִיד תּוֹרָה שֶׁבְּעַל פֶּה אָמַר "אִמְרָתִי"
שֶׁהִיא דְּבָרִים שֶׁנִּמְסְרוּ בְּמֵאמָרָם פֶּה אֶל פֶּה.

וְכֵנֶה לְתוֹרָה שֶׁבְּכֶתֶב מְטֵר וּלְתוֹרָה שֶׁבְּעַל
פֶּה טֵל, לְפִי שֶׁהַתּוֹרָה שֶׁבְּכֶתֶב הִיא הָעֵקֶר
וְיִסּוּד כָּל דָּבָר, וְתוֹרָה שֶׁבְּעַל פֶּה הִיא
תְּקוּנִים וְדִקְדּוּקִים שֶׁאֵינָם מִפְּרָשִׁים בָּה
אֶלָּא נִרְמָזִים, וְהוּא עֲנִיָּן שֶׁלֹּקַח הַכְּתוּב
בְּדַמְיוֹנָה שֶׁדְּמָה תּוֹרָה שֶׁבְּכֶתֶב לְמֵטֶר
שֶׁהוּא יִסּוּד וְעֵקֶר הַכֹּל, וְתוֹרָה שֶׁבְּעַל פֶּה
לְטֵל שֶׁהוּא תְּקוּנָה וְהַעֲמָדָה מֵה שֶׁעָשָׂה
הַמֵּטֶר כְּמוֹ שֶׁהִיא תּוֹרָה שֶׁבְּעַל פֶּה לְתוֹרָה
שֶׁבְּכֶתֶב.

עוֹד יִרְצֶה עַל דֶּרֶךְ אֱמָרָם אֲנִשִּׁי אֶמֶת (בְּאֵר
הַיֵּטֶב או"ח סי' רל"ח בִּשְׁם הָאֲרִיז"ל) כִּי
מִצְוֹת עֵסֶק תּוֹרָה שֶׁבְּכֶתֶב אֵינָה אֶלָּא בַּיּוֹם
וְלֹא בַּלַּיְלָה,

Similarly, Chazal taught in a Beraita (Midrash Shocher Tov 19:7) that during those forty days Moshe was with Hashem, he was able to distinguish between day and night by the subject matter Hashem was teaching him. When Hashem taught him the Written Torah, he knew it was day. When Hashem taught him Mishnah, Moshe knew it was night. The Ohr HaChaim adds that there is a deeper reason for this teaching about not learning Scripture at night, but does not develop that reason here.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:2:4

For this reason, the verse compares the Written Torah to rain, which does not fall constantly but only during the rainy season, and not during the summer. Go and learn from what happened to Rava (Taanis 24b) when he troubled Heaven to bring down rain out of its proper season.

In the same way, Scripture is meant specifically for its designated time, which is the day and not the night.

And the verse compares the Oral Torah to dew. Just as dew never ceases, falling in summer and winter, day and night, so too the Oral Torah has no time that is not its proper time.

The sun's drying up the dew does not disprove the comparison. That disappearance comes from the sun acting upon it, not from the dew itself having an appointed time when it must stop.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:2:5

As the small rain upon the tender grass, and so on. This can be explained in light of what Chazal taught in a Beraita (Midrash Mishlei, Chapter 10): Rabbi Yishmael said: When a person is brought to judgment, if he possesses knowledge of Scripture, they ask him, "Why did you not study Mishnah?" If he possesses knowledge of Mishnah, they ask him, "Why did you not study Talmud?" and so on in this manner.

וְכֵן אָמְרוּ בְּבִרְיָתָא (מדרש שוחר טוב יט, ז)
שְׁמִשָּׁה בְּאוֹתָן אַרְבָּעִים יוֹם שֶׁהָיָה אֵצֶל ה' הָיָה מִכִּיר בֵּין הַיּוֹם לַלַּיְלָה מִהֶלְמוֹד שֶׁהָיָה ה' מְלַמְדוֹ, כְּשֶׁהָיָה מְלַמְדוֹ מִשְׁנָה הָיָה יוֹדֵעַ שֶׁהוּא לַיְלָה, וְיֵשׁ טַעַם בְּדִבְכָּר שָׂאִין לְמוֹד מִקְרָא בַּלַּיְלָה.

וְלָזֶה כִּנָּה תוֹרָה שֶׁבְּכֶתֶב לְמָטָר, שָׂאִינוּ תָמִיד אֶלָּא בִּימֹת הַגְּשָׁמִים אֲבָל לֹא בִּימֹת הַחֶמָּה, וְצָא וּלְמַד מִה שֶׁאַרְעָה לְרִכָּב (תענית כד:) עַל שֶׁהִטְרִיחַ לְהוֹרִיד גְּשָׁמִים שֶׁלֹּא בְּעֶתָם,

כְּמוֹ כֵּן הַמִּקְרָא הוּא דוֹקָא בְּזִמְנוֹ הַמְּגֻבֵּל לוֹ יוֹם וְלֹא לַיְלָה.

וְדָמָה תוֹרָה שֶׁבַעַל פֶּה לְטַל, כְּמוֹ שֶׁהָטַל לֹא מִפְּסִיק קוֹץ וְחֶרֶף יוֹמָם וְלַיְלָה, כְּמוֹ כֵּן תוֹרָה שֶׁבַעַל פֶּה אֵין לָהּ זְמַן שָׂאִינוּ זְמַנָּה,

וְאֵל תִּקְשֶׁה שֶׁהָטַל יִפְרִיחוּנוּ הַשֶּׁמֶשׁ כִּי אֵין הַמְּנִיעָה מִצַּד הַטַּל:

כְּשֶׁעִירָם וְגו'. יִתְבָּאֵר עַל דֶּרֶךְ אֲמָרָם בְּבִרְיָתָא (מדרש משלי י'): אָמַר רַבִּי יִשְׁמַעֵאל, כְּשֶׁמַּעֲמִידִין אֶת הָאָדָם בְּדִין, אִם יֵשׁ בְּיָדוֹ מִקְרָא שׁוֹאֲלִין מִמֶּנּוּ לָמָּה לֹא שָׁנָה, וְאִם יֵשׁ בְּיָדוֹ מִשְׁנָה שׁוֹאֲלִין מִמֶּנּוּ תִּלְמוֹד, וְכֵן עַל זֶה הַדֶּרֶךְ.

Notice what this teaching implies. Someone who has learned Scripture is not immediately asked why he has not learned Maaseh Merkavah, the deepest teachings about Hashem's heavenly chariot. He is asked about the next level he could have reached. The demand is to put in the effort for one stage beyond what he has already achieved, according to his ability.

This is what the verse means by "as the small rain upon the tender grass, and as the showers upon the herb." That is, just as Hashem sends small drops of rain upon the tender grass which is small, and heavy showers of rain upon the mature herb which is large and can withstand it, The same comparison applies to the demands of Torah: each person is addressed according to what he has the strength and ability to attain.

There is both a leniency and a stringency in this principle: a leniency for one who is unable to achieve more, as he is not held accountable for what is beyond him; and a stringency for one who is highly capable, as they demand everything from him, even the deepest secrets of the Divine Chariot.

הנה מעומק דברי הבריתא מוכיחים
הדברים שמי שיש בידו מקרא אין שואליו
ממנו מעשה מרכבה, אלא מדרגה אחת
כפי יכולתו יותר ממה שטרח, שעליו היה
לטרוח גדר למעלה מזו.

והוא אומר "כשעירם וגוי וכרביבים" וגו',
פרוש, כשעור שימטיר ה' טפין קטנים על
הדשא שהוא קטן, וכרביבים שהם טפין
גדולים ועבים עלי עשב שהוא גדול שיכול
לסבול, כדמיון זה מצוות התורה כל אחד
כפי כח שיכול להשיג.

ויש בזה להקל ולהחמיר: להקל על מי

שיכול הרבה, ששואליו ממנו הכל ואפילו

בפשוט · In plain words

The Ohr HaChaim first connects the rain that sustains us with the Torah we are expected to learn, and warns of the danger of withholding that learning. In one reading, rain and dew represent the Written and Oral Torah: the first is the foundation, and the second develops and preserves its meaning. Another reading, drawing on the Torah's inner teachings, connects the comparison to designated times for learning. Finally, gentle rain on small growth and heavier rain on larger growth teach that each person is expected to advance according to his own capacity. This both limits the demand on someone unable to attain more and increases the demand on someone capable of more.

Choose the next step in learning that is within your reach and requires real effort. The Ohr HaChaim's point is that a person is asked about the next level he could have attained. Neither someone else's accomplishments nor the difficulty of a much higher level should distract us from the step that is ours to take.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:3:1

For I will proclaim the name of Hashem. The meaning is that the ultimate focus and intent of Moshe's words in this song is the name of Hashem. This is in line with the teaching of Chazal in the Zohar (Volume 3, 98b) that the entire Torah is comprised of the holy names of Hashem. It is regarding this Torah, which is His blessed name, that Moshe says in the previous verse, "May my teaching drop as the rain." The word "ekra" (translated here as "I will proclaim") can also be understood as related to the word "yekar," meaning preciousness and glory, indicating that Moshe is declaring the preciousness of Hashem's name.

כִּי יִשֶׁם ה' אֶקְרָא. הַפְּנוּנָה כִּי הַדְּבָר אֲשֶׁר
אֵלָיו יִכּוֹן בְּמֵאמָרָיו הוּא שֵׁם ה', עַל דֶּרֶךְ
אֲמָרָם זְכוּרָם לְבָרָכָה (זוהר ח"ג צח:): כָּל
הַתּוֹרָה כְּלָה שְׁמוֹתָיו שֶׁל הַקָּדוֹשׁ בְּרוּךְ
הוּא, וְעַלֶּיהָ הוּא אוֹמֵר "עֲרַף כַּמָּטָר לִקְחֵי"
שֶׁהִיא הַתּוֹרָה שֶׁהִיא שְׁמוֹ יִתְבָּרַךְ, וּפְרוּשׁ
"אֶקְרָא" מִלְּשׁוֹן יִקָּר.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:3:2

Moshe also hinted that although he previously compared the study of Torah to rain and dew, which sustain physical life, a person's primary intention in learning should not be for physical benefits. Rather, the purpose must be to read the book of Hashem's Torah, which is His very name, in order to "ascribe greatness to our God." This is what is called learning Torah for its own sake (Torah lishmah), to magnify and glorify His honored name.

עוֹד רָמַז, שֶׁהֵגֵם שֶׁתִּלָּה לָהֶם עֶסֶק הַתּוֹרָה
בְּטַל וּמָטָר, לֹא תִהְיֶה הַפְּנוּנָה בְּלִמּוּד עַל
זֶה, אֲלָא לְקִרּוֹת בְּסִפְרֵי תוֹרַת ה', וְהוּא
אָמַר "כִּי", פְּרוּשׁ, יִהְיֶה טַעַם "שֵׁם ה'
אֶקְרָא" פְּרוּשׁ, לְקִרּוֹת בְּתוֹרָתוֹ שֶׁהִיא שְׁמוֹ
יִתְבָּרַךְ כִּדְּ שִׁיתָן גִּדּוּל לְאֱלֹהֵינוּ, וְזוֹ תִקְרָא
תּוֹרָה לְשִׁמְהָ לְגִדּוּל וּלְפֶאֶר שֵׁם כְּבוֹדוֹ.

When Moshe says "I will proclaim" (ekra) in the singular, he refers to what each and every individual of Israel does when they study. Alternatively, this can be understood in light of the teaching of Chazal in Tikkunei Zohar (Tikkun 69, page 112a) that the souls of all those who occupy themselves with Torah study are sparks of Moshe Rabbeinu. This is true not only for the generation of the wilderness, but in every generation until the end of time; anyone who studies Torah is bound up with Moshe. For this reason, Moshe attributes the Torah study of all Israel to himself, saying "I will proclaim."

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:3:3

Another explanation is that the phrase "For I will proclaim the name of Hashem" provides the reason for the instruction that follows: "Ascribe greatness to our God." This is based on what Chazal taught in Midrash Shocher Tov (29:12) regarding the verse, "Enthroned upon the praises of Israel" (Psalms 22:4). The Midrash explains that Hashem did not assume His throne of praise until the heavenly hosts declared, "Blessed is Hashem, the God of Israel." He did not find the same satisfaction when they called Him "the God of heaven and earth" or "the God of the angels."

Therefore, Moshe speaks his good words here and says: Ascribe greatness and supreme value to this unique relationship, for Hashem desires to be called specifically "our God." This is achieved through our proclamation, "For I will proclaim the name of Hashem," by reading the Torah which is His name. When Israel is actively engaged in Torah, the praise of the angels calling Him "the God of Israel" is a true praise and magnification.

However, if Israel is not occupied with Torah, and yet the angels call Him "the God of Israel," this praise would be deeply deficient and inappropriate, for they would be associating His divinity with a people who are not connected to His Torah, through which He chose to associate His name with us. Our Rabbis in the Sifrei have offered many other interpretations of this verse, in the manner of a hammer that shatters a rock into many sparks.

The Ohr HaChaim reads Moshe's proclamation as an expression of the preciousness of Torah, which Chazal describe as Hashem's Names. Torah should be learned for its own sake, to honor Hashem, even though learning also brings material blessing. He offers two explanations for Moshe's singular "I": it can speak for each individual learner, or express the connection of all Torah learners' souls to Moshe. Another reading explains that our learning gives substance to the praise of Hashem as Elokei Yisrael, the One who has chosen to be known through His relationship with us.

למעשה · Lemaaseh

Before beginning a seder, take a moment to direct your intention toward honoring Hashem through His Torah. The Ohr HaChaim distinguishes the benefits that learning brings from the purpose for which we learn. That intention can stay with us even when we are also hoping for help with our material needs.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:4:1

"The Rock, His work is perfect." Moshe has just connected learning Torah with dew and rain. That raises a difficulty. A person may learn Torah yet struggle to earn a living and have no bread. He may also see someone who rejects Torah and despises its learners enjoy plenty of food, satisfaction and abundance, the very blessings promised to those who learn. What he sees appears to be the reverse of what he was told.

The Ohr HaChaim warns that this must not lead a person to rebel or, Heaven forbid, fall into heresy. Instead, he should accept the justice of Hashem's judgment and say that Hashem is true and His judgment is true. HaTzur, "the Rock," expresses strength and firmness. Here it describes Hashem's powerful hand governing a person, even when that person experiences hardship.

Even then, a person must affirm, "His work is perfect." This answers the first difficulty: someone whose conduct seems to call for a generous measure of good has instead received very little. The person's limited view does not make Hashem's work defective.

"For all His ways are justice" includes the opposite case too: someone whose conduct seems to call for little good receives a great deal. Both cases fall under Hashem's justice. The Ohr HaChaim explains that suffering does not come upon a righteous person unless he has become liable for it, and good does not come to the wicked unless their deeds have earned it.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:4:2

The verse continues, "A God of faithfulness and without iniquity" (El emunah v' ein aveil). Our Sages in the Sifrei explained: "A God of faithfulness" means He pays the righteous the reward for their righteousness in the World to Come; "and without iniquity" means He pays the wicked the reward for their good deeds in this world.

The deeper meaning of this teaching is based on what the Sages said in Midrash Tehillim on the verse, "You have put gladness in my heart, from the time that their corn and their wine increased" (Psalms 4:8). Dovid said that from the moment he saw the tranquility of the wicked, he drew a logical conclusion from the lesser case to the stronger case: If those who transgress His will receive such goodness, how much more so will those who perform His will! This is the meaning of "A God of faithfulness." The righteous person will find his faith in his reward from Hashem confirmed when he witnesses the attribute of "and without iniquity", which is the reward paid to the wicked in this world for their few merits.

הָרָשָׁעִים שֶׁבְּעוֹלָם הָהָא עַל מַעֲוֵט זְכוּתָם.

The verse concludes, "Just and right is He" (tzaddik v'yashar hu). This means that the Master, Hashem of Hosts, created the world with strict justice, as it is written, "By justice a king establishes the land" (Proverbs 29:4). Our Sages of blessed memory also taught in Midrash Tanchuma that Hashem swore the world would stand on strict justice. However, we find that He possesses the Thirteen Attributes of Mercy, which are entirely mercy. If He swore to establish the world on strict justice, what room is there for mercy?

צַדִּיק וְיָשָׁר הוּא. פְּרוּשׁ, כִּי הָאֲדוֹן ה' צָבָאוֹת

רַחֲמִים, וְאִם נֶשְׁבַּע עַל הַמִּשְׁפָּט מֵהַ מָּקוֹם
לְרַחֲמִים?

Indeed, the order of divine conduct is as follows: Initially, when Hashem sits in judgment, He establishes the strict law on its foundation. But when it comes to executing the sentence, He is appeased with mercy and reconciled through supplication. This is in line with the verse, "Hashem is righteous in all His ways, and pious in all His deeds" (Psalms 145:17). This means that when He comes to direct a matter, He directs it according to the line of strict justice; but in His actual deeds, meaning at the moment of execution, when a person comes and supplicates, He is a merciful and gracious God Who will show him mercy.

אָדָם וּמִתְחַנֵּן – אֵל רַחוּם וְחַנּוּן יְרַחֲמֵהוּ.

This explains the two descriptions, tzaddik and yashar. Tzaddik, "just," means acting according to the requirements of justice. The Ohr HaChaim supports this through Rashi's explanation of the discussion in Avodah Zarah 6a. The Gemara asks whether Noach might have been a treifah, a person with a fatal physical condition. The answer points to the word tamim, "whole" or "perfect." The Ohr HaChaim then cites the question whether Noach was "righteous in his ways and perfect in his deeds." Rashi explains "righteous in his ways" as acting according to the law. That is the meaning of tzaddik here. It describes the initial judgment. Afterward comes yashar, acting beyond the strict requirement of the law. The Ohr HaChaim connects this with Chazal's explanation in Bava Metzia 108b of "Do what is right and good" (Devarim 6:18, and Rashi there).

וְהוּא אָמַר צַדִּיק וְיָשָׁר הוּא, פְּרוּשׁ צַדִּיק

The Ohr HaChaim addresses the difficulty raised by a Torah learner who struggles for sustenance while someone who rejects Torah prospers. Both situations remain within Hashem's justice. Chazal's teaching that even the wicked receive payment for their good deeds strengthens the righteous person's trust in his future reward. He then explains how justice and mercy fit together: Hashem first establishes what justice requires, yet responds with mercy when a person turns to Him in prayer.

Bring a hardship into your tefillah without assuming that the outcome you can see is the whole account. The Ohr HaChaim makes room for prayer precisely while affirming Hashem's justice. Ask for His mercy and remember that what He gives another person does not tell us the full meaning of either person's situation.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:5:1

The Ohr HaChaim reads "He has corrupted for himself; not His children" as describing the harm people do to themselves when they corrupt their conduct. What do they lose? The standing of being called Hashem's children. He cites Chazal in Bava Basra 10a: when Yisrael follows Hashem's way, they are called children; when they do not, they are called servants. On this reading, "not His children" names the loss caused by their own corruption.

The word mumam means "their blemish." One might ask whether a blemish in the children also reflects a blemish in their Father, Heaven forbid. The pasuk answers that it is their own blemish. Hashem created a person upright; the corruption did not come from Him. The Ohr HaChaim cites Yeshayahu's vineyard image (5:1 to 2): the vineyard was carefully prepared, cleared of stones and planted with a choice vine, with the expectation that it would produce grapes. The image places the failure in what grew, rather than in the care given to it. That is the force of "their blemish."

שחת לו לא בָּנָיו. פְּרוּשׁ, כְּשֶׁמִּשְׁחִיתִים דְּרַכָּם גּוֹרָמִים רָעָה לְעַצְמָם, וּמָה רָעָה גּוֹרָמִים – לֹא בָּנָיו, פְּרוּשׁ שְׂאִינָם נִקְרָאִים בְּנֵי אֵל חַי, כְּאֶמְרָם וְכֹרֶנָם לְבִרְכָּה (בבא בתרא י'). כְּשֶׁיִּשְׂרָאֵל הוֹלְכִים בְּדֶרֶכּוֹ שֶׁל מָקוֹם נִקְרָאִים בָּנִים וְכֶשֶׁאִין הוֹלְכִים וְכוּ' נִקְרָאִים עֲבָדִים, וְהוּא אָמְרוּ "שחת לו" שֶׁלֹּא יִקְרָאוּ בָּנָיו שֶׁל הַקְּדוֹשׁ בְּרוּךְ הוּא.

וְאָמְרוּ "מוֹמָם", לִפִּי שֵׁשׁ מָקוֹם לֹמַר סוּף סוּף יִגִּיעַ הַדָּבָר לְאֵב מוֹם הַבָּנִים חָס וְשָׁלוֹם, לָזֶה אָמַר "מוֹמָם", פְּרוּשׁ הַמוֹם מֵהֶם בָּא לֹא מֵאֲבִינוּ, כִּי הוּא בָּרָא אֶת הָאָדָם יָשָׁר, וְכִמְאֹמֶר הַנְּבִיא (ישעיהו ה:א-ב) "פֶּרֶם הָיָה וְגו' וַיַּעֲזֹקְהוּ וַיִּסְקֶלְהוּ וַיַּטְעֵהוּ שׂוֹרֵק וְגו' וַיְקוּ לַעֲשׂוֹת עֲנָבִים" וְגו'. וְהוּא אָמְרוּ "מוֹמָם", פְּרוּשׁ הַמוֹם מֵהֶם בָּא.

The concept of "blemish" can be understood in light of Chazal's teaching in Sotah 3a: "A person does not commit a transgression unless a spirit of folly enters him." This spirit of folly is a harmful spiritual force, and it is called a "blemish," based on the esoteric meaning of the phrase in Deuteronomy 15:21, "a bad blemish." The drawing of this harmful spiritual force upon oneself is entirely due to the person's own actions.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:5:2

Regarding "A generation crooked and perverse": If they were merely crooked, the words of the Torah would make the crooked paths straight. What caused them to become corrupted? It was because they are "crooked and perverse", meaning they stubbornly reinforce their own crookedness. The Ohr HaChaim says he sees this in his own generation with various types of heretics who follow a crooked path; when someone tries to straighten their crookedness, they stubbornly strengthen themselves in their difficult, crooked ways. This stubbornness is what brings about the destruction of their spiritual heritage.

The Ohr HaChaim explains that when Israel corrupts their ways, they bring harm only upon themselves by losing the cherished status of being called Hashem's children. This spiritual blemish originates entirely from their own choices, not from their Creator, who made them upright. He further explains that while ordinary crookedness can be corrected by the Torah, this generation is perverse because they stubbornly reinforce their own crookedness and resist all correction.

לְמַעֲשֵׂה · Lemaaseh

When we make a mistake, we must be careful not to become stubborn or defensive. The Ohr HaChaim teaches that while a simple error can easily be corrected by the Torah's guidance, the real danger lies in becoming 'perverse', stubbornly reinforcing our crooked ways and resisting correction. We can practice accepting constructive feedback with an open heart to keep our paths straight.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:6:1

"Is this how you repay Hashem?" Moshe speaks of repayment to make the contrast clear. Hashem has done good for them, so their response should be good in return. Instead, they are returning evil for the good He has given them.

הֲלִיְהוֹה תִגְמְלוּ זֹאת. אָמַר לְשׁוֹן גְּמוּל לְהַעֲרִיר שְׂבִמְקוֹם שִׁיגְמְלוֹהוּ טוֹבוֹת כְּעַל כָּל אֲשֶׁר גָּמְלָם, הִנֵּה הֵם מְשַׁלְּמִים רָעָה תַּחַת טוֹבָה.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:6:2

Moshe calls them "a base people, and unwise." The Ohr HaChaim points out that "wise" is not the opposite of "base." These are two different failings. Even someone with a naturally base or ungrateful character would avoid treating Hashem this way if he had wisdom. He would recognize that withholding what is right only brings him loss, and that recognition would stop him from acting so badly.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:6:3

This is why the verse concludes by saying, "Is He not your Father Who acquired you?" and so on. Moshe lists four distinct aspects of Hashem's relationship with us. First, He created man, and corresponding to this, the verse says, "Is He not your Father?" Second, He acquired us as servants by taking us out of the hand of Pharaoh, sustaining us in the wilderness, and bringing us to a land full of all good things; corresponding to this, the verse says, "Who acquired you" (kanecha).

וְהוּא מֶה שֶׁנֶּאֱמַר אוֹמֵר "הֲלוֹא הוּא אָבִיךָ" וְגו', סֵדֶר אַרְבַּע חִלּוּקוֹת: א' שֶׁהוּא בָּרָא אֶת הָאָדָם, וּכְנֻדָּה זֶה אָמַר "הוּא אָבִיךָ". שְׁנִית, שֶׁקִּנְיָה אוֹתָנוּ לְעֶבְדִּים בְּמַה שֶׁהוֹצִיאָנוּ מִיַּד פַּרְעֹה וְהַחֲיָה אוֹתָנוּ בַּמִּדְבָּר וְהָבִיא אוֹתָנוּ לָאָרֶץ מְלֵאָה כָּל טוֹב, וּכְנֻדָּה זֶה אָמַר "קִנְיָךְ".

Third, He refined us with an exalted and lofty refinement by placing His Divine Presence among us and granting us prophecy. This is a great refinement, making us a vessel fit to receive prophecy. Corresponding to this, the verse says, "He made you" (asecha), meaning a new making beyond the initial creation alluded to in the term "your Father."

ג' שִׁתְּכֵן אוֹתָנוּ תְּקוּן מְעֻלָּה וְרֵם בְּתֵת
שְׂכִינָתוֹ בְּתוֹכֵנוּ וְנִבֵּא אוֹתָנוּ, וְזֶה תְּקוּן

מַעֲשֵׂה חֵדֶשׁ מִלְבָּד הַבְּרִיאָה הָרְמוּזָה
בְּמֵאמֶר "אֲבִיךָ".

Fourth, He established us with an eternal preparation to merit the life of the World to Come, which is the ultimate purpose. Corresponding to this, the verse says, "and established you" (vayechonenecha). The point of all this is that even an ungrateful person would not act ungratefully toward such a benefactor unless he were completely devoid of intellect. This is why the verse describes them as "foolish and unwise."

ד' שִׁתְּכֵן אוֹתָנוּ הַתְּכוּנָנוּת הַנִּצְחָי לְזִכּוֹת בּוֹ

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:7:1

Remember the days of old. Moshe presents four distinct directives here, corresponding to the four descriptions of Hashem's relationship with us that he mentioned in the previous verse (Deuteronomy 32:6). Corresponding to his statement there, "Is He not your Father?" which refers to Hashem as the Creator, Moshe says here, "Remember the days of old." This refers to the six days of Creation, where one will find that He is indeed the Maker and Creator of all.

And corresponding to his statement there, "Who acquired you?" which refers to the Exodus from Egypt and the other kindnesses through which He acquired us as His own, Moshe says here, "Consider the years of many generations." This means one should contemplate what Hashem did during the years of two specific generations: the generation that left Egypt, and the fourth generation that entered the Land of Israel. Through studying these, you will recognize His deeds for the Jewish people, through which He acquired you.

זְכוֹר יָמוֹת עוֹלָם. אָמַר אַרְבַּע חֲלוּקוֹת כְּנֻגָּד

קָנָה.

And corresponding to his statement there, "He made you," which refers to the lofty spiritual elevation we explained, that He placed His Divine Presence among us and granted us prophecy, Moshe says here, "Ask your father, and he will declare it to you." "Your father" in this context refers to the prophets, as Chazal have explained in the Sifrei.

וּכְנִיחַ אָמְרוּ "עָשָׂה" שֶׁהוּא תִקּוּן עֲלִיּוֹן
שֶׁפִּרְשָׁנוּ בּוֹ שְׁנֵתָן שְׂכִינָתוֹ בְּתוֹכֵנוּ וְנָבֵא

הֵם הַנְּבִיאִים, וְכֵן פִּרְשִׁיהֶם רַבּוֹתֵינוּ זְכוֹרֵהֶם
לְבָרְכָהּ (ספרי).

And corresponding to "and established you," which we explained as referring to the preparations for the World to Come, Moshe says here, "your elders, and they will tell you." This refers to the Sages of Israel, who understand the preparation for and the attainment of the World to Come; they will tell you of these eternal matters.

וּכְנִיחַ "וַיִּכְנִיחַ" שֶׁפִּרְשָׁנוּהָ עַל הַכְּנוּת

The Ohr HaChaim explains that the four directives in this verse, remembering the days of old, contemplating the generations, asking one's father, and consulting the elders, directly correspond to the four descriptions of Hashem's relationship with Israel in the preceding verse. "Remembering the days of old" points to Hashem as Creator ("your Father"); "contemplating the generations" points to the Exodus and conquest of the Land ("Who acquired you"); "asking your father" refers to consulting the prophets about our spiritual elevation ("He made you"); and "consulting the elders" refers to learning from the Sages about the ultimate purpose of the World to Come ("and established you").

We can deepen our relationship with Hashem by actively engaging in the four areas of study outlined by the Ohr HaChaim: studying the wonders of Creation, reflecting on the historical miracles of our redemption, learning the words of the prophets, and absorbing the teachings of our Sages regarding the ultimate purpose of life in the World to Come.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:8:1

When the Most High gave to the nations their inheritance: This means that when Hashem, blessed be He, distributed the nations as inheritances to the supernal guardian angels, it demonstrated that they are of lesser importance to Him. He did not wish for them to be associated directly with His own Name, and so He placed them under the authority of these supernal ministers.

בְּהִנָּחֵל עֲלֵיוֹן גּוֹיִם. פְּרוּשׁ, כְּשֶׁהִנָּחֵל ה' בְּרוּךְ הוּא אֶת הַגּוֹיִם לְשָׂרֵי מַעְלָה, זֶה יְגִיד אֲשֶׁר הֵם פְּחוּתִים אֶצְלוֹ, אֲשֶׁר לֹא רָצָה שִׁיתְּכֻנּוּ לְשֵׁמוֹ, וְנִתְּנָם לְשָׂרֵי מַעְלָה:

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:8:2

When He separated the children of men: This means that Hashem did not hand over all the nations to a single guardian angel. Instead, He separated them and assigned a specific portion to each individual minister. The manner of this division, when He set the borders of the peoples, was according to the number of the children of Israel. To understand this, you must know that all of Hashem's creations are structured with one corresponding to another, representing good and evil. All the souls of created beings were planted by Hashem from two primary trees: one good tree and one evil tree.

בְּהַפְרִידוֹ בְּנֵי אָדָם. פְּרוּשׁ, שֶׁלֹּא מָסַר ה' כָּל הָאוֹמוֹת בְּיַד שָׂר אֶחָד, אֲלֵא הַפְרִידָם וְנָתַן חֶלֶק לְכָל שָׂר וְשָׂר. וְאוֹפֵן הָחַלּוּקָה שֶׁעָשָׂה בָּהֶם כְּשִׁיצַב גְּבוּלָם הִיָּתָה לְמִסְפַּר בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל. פְּרוּשׁ, יֵשׁ לָהּ לְדַעַת כִּי כָל מַעֲשֵׂה ה' עָשָׂה זֶה לְעוֹמֶת זֶה וְטוֹב וְרָע, וְכָל נִפְשׁוֹת שֶׁבְּנִבְרָאִים נִטְעָם ה' מִשְׁנֵי אֵילָנוֹת: אֵילָן אֶחָד טוֹב וְאֶחָד רָע.

The good tree is Adam HaRishon, the first man, while the evil tree is Samael, the evil spiritual counterpart, called adam beliyaal, the corrupt man. When Adam HaRishon sinned and evil became mixed with good, the offspring of Adam HaRishon began to produce corrupt souls as well. This continued until a single pure soul emerged, which included within it all the holy souls, thereby separating out the good tree anew. This soul was our father Yaakov, peace be upon him.

This is why Chazal teach in Bava Metzia 84a and the Zohar, Volume 3, page 244a, that the beauty of our father Yaakov was a reflection of the beauty of Adam HaRishon. Understand these deep matters. This holy tree contains seventy branches, which correspond to the seventy souls of Yaakov's family who descended to Egypt. Therefore, when Hashem separated the nations, He set their borders according to the number of the children of Israel, establishing exactly seventy nations to correspond to the seventy branches of holiness.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:8:3

The purpose of this arrangement is so that each specific aspect of every holy branch should rule over its corresponding counterpart in the realm of evil. This is the inner meaning of the verse in Mishlei 5:5, Her feet go down to death, which teaches that the feet of holiness tread upon the heads of the impure forces. Consequently, the branches of Yaakov rule and reign over the nations.

The next verse then states, For Hashem's portion is His people, which explains the reason for this setup. Since the nation Hashem chose to rule over directly is Israel, He designed this system to elevate and give the children of Israel dominion over all the nations. Through this, when He rules over Israel, He effectively rules over the entire world.

The phrase, Hashem's portion is His people, refers specifically to Israel after they received the Torah, as they were then fully designated as the people of Hashem. The expression, Yaakov is the lot of His inheritance, uses the word chevel, meaning a rope, to signify the primary cord of the inheritance. This relates directly to what I have already pointed out regarding the rabbinic teaching in Bava Metzia 84a that the beauty of Yaakov reflects the beauty of Adam HaRishon.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:8-4

He offers another explanation based on two levels of souls. Some come from a higher spiritual world, and these are described as "Hashem's portion," a portion from Hashem, so to speak. Others come from the place called nachalas Shaddai, "the inheritance of Shaddai," and these are described by "Yaakov, the cord of His inheritance." For clarity, the author is distinguishing spiritual sources; "so to speak" marks the limits of describing this relationship in human language.

The Torah is precise in using the word chevel, which means a rope, to hint at a profound concept revealed by the masters of Kabbalah. Every living soul in a person is connected by a spiritual cord to its source. This cord extends from the nostrils and remains bound to its supernal root above, and through this cord the soul draws its life force.

וְאָמַר "כִּי חֵלֶק ה' עִמּוֹ" פָּרוּשׁ טַעַם לָזֶה, לְהִיּוֹת שְׁהֶאֱמָה אֲשֶׁר בָּחַר לוֹ ה' שִׁיְהִיָּהּ הוּא הַמּוֹשֵׁל עָלֶיהָ הֵם יִשְׂרָאֵל, לָזֶה נִתְּכּוֹן ה' וְהַמְלִיךְ וְנִשְׂא אֶת בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל עַל כָּל הָאֻמוֹת, וּבָזָה כְּאֲשֶׁר הוּא מוֹלִיךְ עַל יִשְׂרָאֵל הֵנָּה הוּא מוֹלִיךְ עַל כָּל הָעוֹלָם כָּלּוּ.

וְדִקְדַּק לוֹמַר "חֶבֶל" לְרִמּוֹ עֲנִיָּן גָּדוֹל אֲשֶׁר גָּלוּ יוֹדְעֵי חוֹן, כִּי כָּל נִפְשׁ הַחַיּוּנִי שְׁבָאָדָם יֵשׁ לָהּ חוּט אֶחָד דְּבוּק עִם שְׂרָשָׁהּ, וְהוּא יוֹצֵא מֵהַנְּחִירִים וְדְבוּק בְּשָׂרָשׁוֹ לְמַעַלָּה, וּמִשָּׁם יוֹנֶקֶת הַנֶּפֶשׁ לְחַיּוּת.

Regarding the soul of a wicked person, the verse in Bamidbar 15:31 says, That soul shall utterly be cut off, meaning that Hashem cuts off this connecting cord that binds the soul to the place from which it was carved. Once cut, it can no longer draw spiritual sustenance, and this state is spiritual death, may Merciful Heaven save us. Conversely, regarding the righteous, the verse in Deuteronomy 4:4 states, But you who cling to Hashem your God are alive today. This is the meaning of, Yaakov is the lot of His inheritance, representing this unbroken spiritual cord. Understand this well.

בפשוט · In plain words

The Ohr HaChaim explains the nations' division through heavenly ministers, in contrast with Hashem's direct rule over Yisrael. He describes seventy branches of holiness, rooted in Yaakov, corresponding to seventy nations and governing their opposing forces. He then offers another reading based on different spiritual sources of souls. The word chevel, a cord, expresses the soul's continuing dependence on its source for life; being cut off severs that connection, while cleaving to Hashem sustains it.

למעשה · Lemaaseh

The image of the cord asks us to value the connection that sustains spiritual life. In one choice today, take the mitzvah seriously as part of cleaving to Hashem. The reflection follows the Ohr HaChaim's contrast between maintaining that connection and becoming cut off from it.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:10:1

He found him in a desert land, and in the waste, etc. It appears that the verse intends to follow the path of Chazal in Berachot 9b, who said that Israel did not leave Egypt until they had made it like a deep sea that has no fish in it, meaning they emptied it of all its spiritual sparks. Furthermore, they said in Likkutei Torah on Vayeira that if Israel had delayed any longer in Egypt, they would have been absorbed there forever, because they would have entered the fiftieth gate of impurity.

To describe this, the verse says, 'He found him in a land of desert', meaning a land that is desolate and has no spiritual substance left in it. For this reason, the text does not say 'He found him in the desert' (which would refer to the physical wilderness), but rather 'in a land of desert' (referring to Egypt which had become spiritually desolate). Understand this.

ימצאֵהוּ בְּאֶרֶץ מִדְבָּר וּבְתֵהוּ וְגו'. נראה כי יכוון הכתוב על דרך אֶמְרָם וְכֹרֶנָם לְבָרְכָה (ברכות ט:): לֹא יֵצְאוּ יִשְׂרָאֵל מִמִּצְרַיִם עַד שֶׁשָּׂאוֹהָ כְּמִצּוּלָה שְׂאִין בָּהּ דָּגִים וְכו', וְאָמְרוּ עוֹד (ליקוטי תורה וירא) שְׂאֵם הָיוּ יִשְׂרָאֵל מִתְעַכְבִּין בְּמִצְרַיִם הָיוּ נִטְמָעִים שָׁם לְעַד לְעוֹלָם כִּי הָיוּ נִכְנָסִים בְּחִמְשֵׁי שְׁעָרֵי טְמָאָה,

לָזֶה אָמַר יִמְצָאֵהוּ בְּאֶרֶץ שְׁהִיא מִדְבָּר, פְּרוֹשׁ חֲרָבָה וְאִין בָּהּ מִמֶּשׁ, וְלָזֶה לֹא אָמַר יִמְצָאֵהוּ בַּמִּדְבָּר אֲלָא בְּאֶרֶץ מִדְבָּר, וְהִבּוּ:

The verse further explains that not only was the land a desert, completely devoid of any spark of holiness, but it was also 'a waste, a howling wilderness.' This means it was filled with filth and spiritual impurity. You will find that they said in the Zohar, Volume I, page 16a, that 'waste' (tohu) represents a specific force of impurity (kelipah), and similarly 'a howling wilderness' represents the forces of evil. Thus, the place was entirely stripped of good and completely filled with evil.

Because of this danger, Hashem 'compassed him about' (yesovevenhu), a term denoting protection. The Torah uses the future tense here to teach that this protection which He provided for them was not a temporary event; rather, it remains constant and will endure forever. The depth of this protection is that He extracted them from that place of evil so they would not be absorbed there.

Furthermore, in that very place, when Hashem brought the plagues upon Egypt, He protected them, just as the verses state: 'but of the livestock of the children of Israel...' (Exodus 9:6), 'in the land of Goshen...' (Exodus 9:26), 'but for all the children of Israel there was light...' (Exodus 10:23), and 'He will not allow the destroyer...' (Exodus 12:23). This is the meaning of 'He compassed him about.'

Yevonenehu, "He gave him understanding," refers to Hashem's gift of Torah, the source of understanding. Through it He guards Yisrael "like the pupil of His eye," as in "Understanding will guard you" (Mishlei 2:11). The eye image also appears in Zechariah 2:12: "Whoever touches you touches the pupil of His eye."

וְאָמְרוּ יְבוֹנְנֵהוּ – פְּרוֹשׁ, עַל יַד שְׁנֵיתָן לָהֶם

כְּמֹאֲמַר הַנְּבִיא (זְכַרְיָה ב:יב) "כִּי הַנוֹגֵעַ
בְּכֶם כְּנוֹגֵעַ בְּכַבֵּת עֵינֹו".

The Ohr HaChaim explains the image through the eye's delicacy. It cannot bear a finger touching it because the finger is coarse compared with the eye, which is refined. He uses this contrast to express how something spiritual cannot bear contact with what is coarse and physical.

He connects this to Rabbi Shimon bar Yochai's statement in the Zohar (volume 2, 211b): "Woe to the soul that bears a foreign fire." The fire in which the soul is punished is foreign to the soul's own fire. By contrast, the righteous soul immerses in the fire called Nehar Dinur while that fire has not become distant or material, and therefore does not suffer from it. For clarity, he is distinguishing a fire alien to the soul's refined nature from a spiritual fire compatible with it. That distinction helps explain why contact with coarseness can be painful to what is spiritually refined.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:10:4

This is what the verse means here by 'as the apple of His eye.' Because Israel became spiritual beings, everything outside of them is considered coarse and physical. Therefore, even the touch of something spiritually coarse harms and damages them, just as the touch of a hand harms the delicate apple of the eye.

This high spiritual status was achieved only after He gave them the inheritance of the Torah. For this reason, the verse first says 'He cared for him' (yevonenehu, instructing him in Torah) and only afterward says 'He kept him as the apple of His eye.' This concept also explains the underlying reason for the negative commandments, which protect this delicate spiritual state. Understand this.

Alternatively, the words 'He cared for him, He kept him' (yevonenehu yitzrenhu) can be understood in light of what Chazal said in Tractate Berachot 54b: Three categories of people require special protection, and one of them is a Torah scholar (talmid chacham). The reason for this is that the damaging spiritual forces are envious of the high stature of a Torah scholar and provoke him.

To address this, the verse says 'yevonenehu', meaning He gives him the Torah, which is called understanding (tevunah) in Proverbs 2:11. Because He has elevated him to this level, He must then take responsibility to guard him, as it says, 'He kept him' (yitzrenhu), protecting him from those envious forces.

The Ohr HaChaim explains that Hashem found Israel in Egypt when it was spiritually desolate and filled with impurity. He protected them from being absorbed by the impurity and shielded them during the plagues. By giving them the Torah, He elevated them to a refined spiritual state, making them as sensitive to spiritual harm as the delicate apple of an eye is to physical touch. This high spiritual status requires the ongoing protection of the commandments and special divine guardianship.

The Ohr HaChaim connects the prohibitions of the Torah with guarding the spiritual sensitivity that Torah gives us. When a prohibition feels like a restriction, consider what it protects. Let that perspective help us take care with a particular boundary in our own avodas Hashem.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:11:1

"Like an eagle that awakens its nest." The Ohr HaChaim notes Chazal's explanations in the Sifrei, as cited by Rashi, then offers another reading. Vayikra Rabbah 17:4 teaches that when Yisrael violates Hashem's will, judgment does not strike at their lives first. It begins by awakening a person through afflictions of the house, then of the clothing, before going further.

That is how he reads the eagle awakening its nest: Hashem awakens His children. The awakening is also measured to what they can bear. He cites Bereishis Rabbah 55:2, that Hashem tests a person only according to the measure he is capable of bearing.

כַּנָּשֶׁר יַעִיר קִנּוּ. רַ"ל (ספרי) דָּרְשׁוּ מַה שֶּׁדָּרְשׁוּ בּוֹ, (עֵינֵי רַשִׁי ז"ל) וְחוּץ מִדְּבָרֵיהֶם יִתְבָּאֵר עַל דֶּרֶךְ אֲמָרָם ז"ל (ויקרא רבה יז:ד) כִּי כָשִׁי שֶׁרָאֵל עוֹבְרִים רְצוֹנוֹ אֵין בַּעַל הַדִּין נוֹגֵעַ בְּנַפְשׁוֹת תַּחֲלָה אֶלָּא מִתְחִיל לְהַעִירוֹ בְּנִגְעֵי בָתִּים אַחֵר כֹּף בְּנִגְעֵי בְּגָדִים וְכוּ';

וְהוּא מֵאֲמַר "כַּנָּשֶׁר יַעִיר קִנּוּ" כִּמּוֹ כֵּן ה' מְעוֹרֵר בְּנָיו, גַּם מְעוֹרֵרָם כִּפִּי הִיכָלָת שְׁיוּכָלוֹ עֲמוּד בּוֹ, כְּאֲמָרָם ז"ל (בראשית רבה נח:ב) שֶׁאֵין ה' מְנַסֶּה הָאָדָם אֶלָּא בְּשִׁעוֹר שְׁיוּכָל לְסָבוֹל.

And the verse's statement, He spreads His wings, is understood in light of the Sages' teaching in the Sifrei on Devarim 3:29 that Hashem's right hand is constantly stretched out to receive those who return. If, through the awakening that Hashem stirs up within Israel, they are moved to return in repentance, His right hand is immediately stretched out to welcome them. The Torah uses the future tense to convey this sequence: the very reason He spreads His wings from the outset is in order to gather in the Jewish person who returns in repentance. Were it not for this goal of receiving the penitent, He would not have spread His wings at all.

וְאָמְרוּ "פֶּרֶשׁ כַּנְפָיו" וְגו', עַל דֶּרֶךְ אֲמָרָם

בְּתִשְׁבּוּבָה, שְׁוִילֵת זֶה לֹא הִיא פֶּרֶשׁ כַּנְפָיו.

And the verse's statement, He carries him on His wing, can be understood based on the Sages' teaching in Tikkunei Zohar, Tikkun 70, page 131a, on the verse in Kohelet 10:20, The winged one will tell the matter. They explain that there is a specific class of angels called possessors of wings. Their sacred service is to carry aloft on their wings every good word and blessing of Hashem that comes out of the mouth of a Jewish person. This is the meaning of, He carries him on His wing, meaning that He carries upward the spiritual goodness that comes from the person.

The Ohr HaChaim reads the eagle's awakening of its nest as Hashem's measured call to teshuvah. Judgment begins with a person's surroundings, and the test is within his capacity. The spreading wings express Hashem's readiness to receive one who returns. The final image, carrying on a wing, refers to angels who carry upward a Jew's good words and blessings of Hashem.

The LORD alone did lead him, And there was no strange god with Him.

אור החיים הקדוש

AI-assisted explanatory translation

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:12:1

"Hashem alone will lead him." The Ohr HaChaim explains this through Midrash Tanchuma, Tzav 7, on Hoshea 4:17: "Ephraim is joined to idols; leave him alone." Chazal read this as a teaching about unity. When Yisrael is united, even the presence of idolatry does not bring immediate punishment. Hanach lo, "leave him alone," expresses granting rest or relief, like the relief granted to the provinces in Esther. He therefore reads badad as the people being one unit: when they are united, Hashem leads them.

Source note: the Hebrew edition prints Esther 2:11 beside "he granted relief to the provinces." The quoted words are in Esther 2:18. The Hebrew is reproduced unchanged.

ה' בָּדַד יְנַחֵנוּ. יִתְפָּאֵר עַל דֶּרֶךְ אֱמָרָם
זְכוֹנָם לְבָרְכָה (תנחומא, צו ז) בַּפֶּסוּק
(הושע ד:יז) "חֲבוּר עֲצָבִים אֶפְרַיִם הֵנִיחַ לוֹ",
כְּשִׁישְׂרָאֵל יֵשׁ בֵּינֵיהֶם אַחָדוּת אֲפִלּוּ עוֹבְדֵי
עֲבוּדָה זָרָה הֵנִיחַ לוֹ, פֶּרוּשׁ עַל דֶּרֶךְ (אסתר

"ה' בָּדַד" פֶּרוּשׁ כְּשֶׁהָעָם בָּדַד לְשׁוֹן בַּד – ה'
יְנַחֵנוּ.

He continues this reading with "and there is no foreign god with him." Although idolatry is present, Hashem does not count that sin against them by punishing them in this situation. The Ohr HaChaim compares the negative wording with Chazal's reading in Sukkah 41a of "No one seeks her" (Yirmiyahu 30:17). His text summarizes that inference as "this implies that she has [one who seeks her]." He uses the comparison here to read "there is none with him" as implying that a foreign god is in fact present, but Hashem is not punishing the people for it.

For clarity, the Gemara itself phrases its inference as "she requires seeking." The Ohr HaChaim's point here is that the negative wording carries an implication beyond its surface meaning; he is explaining the withholding of punishment, not permitting idolatry.

וְאֵין עִמּוֹ אֵל נֹכַר – פְּרוּשׁ, הַגֵּם שֶׁהֵם עוֹבְדֵי
עֲבוֹדָה זָרָה אֵין ה' מְחַשֵּׁב לוֹ עוֹן זֶה.
וּמֵאֲמַר "אֵין עִמּוֹ" תִּתְּפֹרֵשׁ עַל דֶּרֶךְ

אָמַר "אֵין עִמּוֹ" מִכָּלֵל שֶׁיֵּשׁ עִמּוֹ, אֶלָּא
שֶׁאֵין ה' מִסְּרוֹ עַל זֶה.

He then offers a different explanation. When will "Hashem alone lead him"? When the element of evil has come to an end within Yisrael. On this reading, "there is no foreign god with him" means that the evil attached to a person through Adam's sin has been removed. For clarity, this follows the earlier discussion of evil becoming mixed with good through Adam HaRishon's sin. The two readings are distinct: the first discusses unity despite sin, while this one describes guidance after that evil is gone.

The Ohr HaChaim explains that the description of Hashem raising Israel to ride on the high places of the earth and feeding them with abundance is not a continuation of the previous verses. Instead, it begins a new narrative sequence detailing the lavish goodness Hashem bestowed upon Israel, which ultimately led to the tragic consequence of them growing fat, becoming complacent, and rebelling against Him.

When we experience periods of great success, comfort, and abundance, we must recognize that these blessings are a test of our spiritual focus. Instead of letting physical prosperity lead to complacency or rebellion, we should use our elevated state to deepen our gratitude and commitment to Hashem.

The words "no-god" mean that they did not even sacrifice to these demons because they considered them to be a god, but rather only to have them fulfill their physical needs and desires. And regarding what they do for actual idol worship, the verse says, "gods that they knew not." This means that even though they do not know them, nor do they understand the true nature of these idols, they worship them anyway. Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:18:1

Of the Rock that begot thee thou wast unmindful (Teshil). This can be explained based on the teaching of Chazal in the Zohar, volume 3, page 207a. At the time when the Holy One, blessed be He, wished to create man, He consulted with the angels. They said before Him, "What is man that You should remember him?" (Psalms 8:5). Hashem strongly asserted Himself against the words of the angels, created man, and punished those angels who opposed. Thus, when Israel transgresses His will, they weaken (matishim) the very reason and justification for man's creation. This is the meaning of "the Rock that begot thee, you have weakened" (teshi, which is read as weakening).

צור ילדה תשי. יתבאר על דרך אמרם זכרונם לברכה (זוהר חלק ג' ר"ל) בשעה שרצה הקדוש ברוך הוא לברא את האדם, נמלה במלאכים ואמרו לפניו "מה אנוש" וגו' (תהלים ח:ה), ונתעצם ה' נגד דברי המלאכים ובראו והעניש המנגדים, עד כאן, ולזה כשישראל עוברים רצונו מח' לשים טעם לידתו של אדם, והוא אמרו "ילדה תשי".

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:18:2

And didst forget God that bore thee (Mechol'lecha). The word mechol'lecha can be interpreted as an expression of adornment (chelyah), similar to the verse, "and she adorned herself (vata'ad) with her ear-rings and her jewels (vechelyatah)" (Hosea 2:15). The meaning is that He made you a crown and an adornment over all other created beings, even over the angels, as in the verse, "You have caused men to ride over our heads" (Psalms 66:12). Alternatively, it can be understood in the sense of the verse, "Israel, in whom I will be glorified" (Isaiah 49:3), meaning that He made you an adornment for Himself, blessed be He. Our Sages of blessed memory in the Sifrei have also offered many homiletical interpretations on this verse, like a hammer that shatters a rock into many sparks.

AI-assisted study aids · Deuteronomy 32:18

בפשוט · In plain words

The Ohr HaChaim offers two deep insights into this rebuke. First, he explains that when Israel sins, they weaken (teshi) the very justification for humanity's creation, which Hashem defended against the angels. Second, he interprets 'mechol'lecha' as an expression of adornment, reminding Israel that Hashem crowned them as the ultimate ornament of creation and a source of divine glory, a status they ungratefully forgot.

למעשה · Lemaaseh

When we choose to do a mitzvah, we are not just performing a personal act of obedience; we are actively justifying the creation of humanity. Remembering that Hashem created us to be the crown and adornment of His world can inspire us to carry ourselves with spiritual dignity and avoid actions that diminish this divine glory.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:20:1

For they are a froward generation, and so on. This is explained as follows: Since the verse just stated, 'I will hide My face from them, I will see what their end shall be,' this implies that Hashem will not look upon them or see them even if they perform teshuvah and cry out in prayer. Now, it would seem improper for Hashem to act this way (by ignoring sincere repentance). To resolve this, the verse concludes by giving the reason: 'For they are a froward generation' (tahpuchot), meaning they constantly turn and flip-flop from good to evil. And when it says 'children' (banim), it means that even if they intend to improve and reach the level where they are considered children of Hashem, 'there is no faithfulness in them' (lo emun bam). This is because they will quickly return to their wicked ways, and their repentance is not complete or lasting. Therefore, it is entirely fitting for Hashem to hide His face from them.

The Ohr HaChaim explains that Hashem's decision to hide His face and ignore the people's cries is justified because they are a flip-flopping generation. Even when they repent and elevate themselves to the status of children, their commitment lacks stability and faithfulness, as they inevitably slide back into wickedness.

Were it not that I dreaded the enemy's provocation, and so on. The meaning is that the enemies of Israel have provoked Me to anger many times. This is the meaning of the word "agur" (I dreaded), which is related to the expression "agrah vakatzir" (she gathers in the harvest) in Proverbs 6:8. It means: I have gathered and stored up the anger provoked by the enemy, and they are ripe for destruction. However, when they see that I have completely wiped out the name of Israel, Heaven forbid, "their adversaries would misunderstand." This means they would think that Israel's faith is foreign and not righteous, and the truth would thus be turned into a lie, Heaven forbid.

וְשָׁלוֹם.

Furthermore, Hashem is concerned "lest they should say: Our hand is exalted." This means that in addition to denying Israel's faith and religion, they would sin further by claiming that their own faith is the correct one. This is what is meant by "lest they should say: Our hand is exalted," meaning that their goodness and tranquility do not come from Hashem, but rather from the idols they worship.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:27:2

And this is the meaning of "and not Hashem has wrought all this." This refers to all of their own goodness and success. Their proof for this claim would be that Israel did not do any evil that they themselves do not do, and indeed they do even worse, yet they ruled over Israel and destroyed them.

The Ohr HaChaim explains that Hashem refrains from completely destroying Israel because the enemies would misinterpret it. They would reject Israel's true faith and credit their own idols with their prosperity and success. Alternatively, they would claim that their idols' power and will joined in bringing about Israel's destruction.

We see from here how deeply Hashem cares about the perception of His truth in the world, even withholding deserved punishment from Israel to prevent His Name from being desecrated. A practical reflection from this point is to be exceptionally mindful of how our actions reflect on the Torah and Hashem's Name, ensuring that our conduct always sanctifies His Name in the eyes of others.

For they are a nation void of counsel. This means that there is no reason to hope that the gentile nation will observe what happens to Israel, take a moral lesson, and say to themselves: If these people, who only angered Hashem a little, suffered such a fate, we must improve our own ways.

This is the meaning of the words, "for they are a nation void of counsel." It means that such a logical process is simply not in their nature, and they are completely lost when it comes to such constructive advice.

And the verse continues, "and there is no understanding in them" to deduce one matter from another. This is just as the next verse says, "If they were wise, they would understand this," meaning they would understand the fierce anger that came upon Israel, and from this they would understand what their own end will be for their own transgressions.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:30:1

How should one chase... This is to be explained as a rebuke directed at the gentile nation, who fails to wake up and take notice even when confronted with a highly visible, shocking phenomenon, which is: "How could one chase a thousand," and so on. This means that one soldier from the gentile nations could pursue a thousand soldiers of Israel. For in all standard wars fought between the nations of the world, such a phenomenon is never found; no enemy ever attains such a degree of strength and dominance over other nations.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:30:2

How should one chase a thousand... This means that one particular soldier from the nations could chase a thousand of Israel, and so on. See what I have written in Parashat Bechukotai on the verse (Leviticus 26:8), "And five of you shall chase a hundred," and so on.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:30:3

Except their Rock had given them over... The word "Rock" (Tzuram) refers to the Attribute of Justice, just as I explained on the verse (Deuteronomy 32:4), "The Rock, His work is perfect." And the verse continues, "and Hashem delivered them up." This refers to the Attribute of Mercy joining together with the Attribute of Justice. For without this agreement of the Attribute of Mercy, Israel would never have suffered such a massive downfall as to have a thousand of them fall before a single enemy soldier.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:31:1

For their rock is not as our Rock, and so on. This explains the reason why the nations will attribute the phenomenon of one of them chasing a thousand of Israel to the fact that their Rock sold them and Hashem delivered them. They will not attribute it to a lack of ability on Hashem's part, Heaven forbid.

This is similar to what Moshe said to Hashem during the incident of the spies, that the nations would misinterpret the event. For the strength of Israel is not like the strength of the nations. There is no idol that has ever endured for many days, based on the esoteric principle of the verse in Proverbs 12:19, But a lying tongue is but for a moment.

Go out and learn this from the idol Chemosh, after which most of the nations went astray, and which performed wonders, as written in the words of Rabbeinu Saadia Gaon. Yet, despite this, it became as if it had never existed, and many other idols met the same fate.

כִּי לֹא כְצוּרֵנוּ וְגו'. פְּרוּשׁ, הַטַּעַם שֶׁיִּתְּלוּ טַעַם אֶחָד אֵלֶּף כִּי צוּרָם מְכָרָם וְה' הַסִּגֵּרָם, וְלֹא יִתְּלוּ לֹמַר מִבְּלִתִּי יְכָלֶת ה' וְגו' חֵס וְשָׁלוֹם,

וּכְמֵאֲמַר מֹשֶׁה לַה' בְּמַעֲשֵׂה הַמְּרִגָּלִים, כִּי הַתּוֹקֵף שֶׁל יִשְׂרָאֵל אֵינוֹ כְּתִקְפָּם שֶׁל הָאוֹמוֹת, שְׂאִין לָהֶם עֲבוּדָה זָרָה שֶׁעֲמִידָה יָמִים רַבִּים, בְּסוּד (מִשְׁלִי יב:יט) "יַעַד אֲרִגִּיעָה לְשׁוֹן שְׁקָר",

וְצֵא וְלָמַד מִעֲבוּדָה זָרָה שֶׁל כְּמוֹשׁ אֲשֶׁר תָּעוּ אַחֲרָיָה רֹב הָאוֹמוֹת וְכִמָּה הִפְּלִיָּאָה עֲשׂוֹת כְּכַתּוּב בְּדִבְרֵי רַבֵּינוּ סַעֲדִיָּה גָאוֹן, וְאַף עַל פִּי כֵן וְהָיָה כִּלְאֵי הָיָה, וְרַבּוֹת כָּאֵלֶּה. אָבֵל

But our Rock is great in power, and we always rise in holiness. Even the nations of the world agree to this, as stated in the words of the prophet in Malachi 1:11, For My name is great among the nations. Therefore, when they see the downfall of Israel in this manner, they too will judge it so.

צוּרֵנוּ שְׂגִיָּא כַּח מַעְלִין בְּקִדְּשׁ וְאַפְלוּ הַגּוֹיִם

וְכִשְׂרְאוֹ מִפְּלֵת יִשְׂרָאֵל בְּדֶרֶךְ זֶה גַם הֵם
יִשְׁפָּטוּ כֵּן,

And this is the meaning of, Even our enemies themselves being judges. The word pelilim means judges, as in Exodus 21:22, And he shall pay as the judges determine. This means that they too will judge that their rock is not like our Rock. However, when they actually see the destruction of Israel, they will deny the truth, as it is written earlier in verse 27, Lest their adversaries should misinterpret... lest they should say, and so on.

וְהוּא אָמְרוּ "וְאֵיבֵינוּ פְּלִילִים" לְשׁוֹן דִּינִים,

The Ohr HaChaim explains that the nations of the world fundamentally recognize that their idols have no lasting power, whereas Hashem is the supreme, eternal Power. Therefore, when they witness Israel's unnatural defeats, they logically understand that it must be because Hashem Himself delivered Israel into their hands. However, despite this inner intellectual realization, their arrogance and hatred lead them to outwardly deny the truth and falsely claim that their own power or idols brought them victory.

לְמַעַשֶׂה · Lemaaseh

We must realize that even those who oppose the Torah often possess an inner, intellectual awareness of Hashem's supreme truth, even if they outwardly deny it. When we face challenges or opposition, we should not be swayed by the external, false narratives of the world, but remain firmly anchored in our faith, knowing that the truth of Hashem's sovereignty is absolute and ultimately recognized by all.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:32:1

For their vine is of the vine of Sodom, and so on. This verse explains the reason for their being sold into exile, as well as the reason for the earlier decree of "I said I would scatter them into corners" (Deuteronomy 32:26).

Regarding the expression "from the vine," I have already made known that for every holy concept, there is a corresponding counterpart in the impure side, the sitra achra. This is in keeping with the verse, "G-d has made even the one corresponding to the other" (Ecclesiastes 7:14).

Israel is compared to a holy vine, as the Sages taught in Bereishit Rabbah 99:8, based on the verse, "You plucked up a vine out of Egypt" (Psalms 80:9).

Correspondingly, when Israel acted wickedly, the Torah says of them, "their vine is of the vine of Sodom." This vine represents the evil tree of spiritual attachment that nurtures the wicked.

This is why the verse concludes, "their grapes are grapes of gall, their clusters are bitter."

Since they only attach themselves to this evil source but their entire branch does not originate from it, the verse says "from the vine of Sodom" rather than saying "for their vine is the vine of Sodom."

כִּי מִגֶּפֶן וגו'. פֶּרוֹשׁ, נוֹתֵן טַעַם לְמִכְרֵתָם וּלְהַקְוֶדָם לָהּ "אֲמַרְתִּי אֶפְאַיֵּהֶם".

The Torah chose Sodom out of all possible evil comparisons because the measure of Israel's sins had become full, just like Sodom.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:32:2

The verse continues, "and of the fields of Gomorrah." Just as within the branches of the holy tree there are distinct spiritual levels, one above the other, where the higher level is described with a masculine term because it acts as a giver of influence, and the lower level is described with a feminine term because it receives that influence,

וְאָמְרוּ "וּמַשְׁדָּמוֹת עֲמוֹרָה", כִּי כִּמוֹ

לְהִיטוֹ מִשְׁפִּיעַ, וְהַתַּחְתּוֹן יִתֵּחַס אֵלָיו שֵׁם
נִקְבָּה לְהִיטוֹ נִשְׁפָּע,

so too does the Torah compare their attachment to their evil root using two distinct levels. The first level is called a "vine," and the second level is called a "field." The wise student will understand the corresponding pattern in holiness, and his eyes will be enlightened.

The Ohr HaChaim explains that the comparison to the vine of Sodom and the fields of Gomorrah justifies the harsh decrees of exile. Just as Israel is compared to a holy vine when they do good, they attach themselves to the impure spiritual counterpart of Sodom when they sin. The distinction between the "vine" of Sodom and the "fields" of Gomorrah represents two distinct levels of spiritual attachment to evil, corresponding to the giving and receiving dimensions found in holiness.

לְמַעֲשֶׂה · Lemaaseh

We must realize that our spiritual attachments are dynamic; when we turn away from holiness, we risk connecting ourselves to negative spiritual influences. To prevent this, we should actively cultivate our connection to the "holy vine" by engaging in Torah study and performing mitzvos daily, ensuring our spiritual roots remain firmly planted in holiness.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:34:1

Is not this laid up in store with Me, and so on. The meaning is: even though, because of the anger of the enemy, I refrained from executing upon Israel the judgment they deserved for their actions, they will not because of this be exempt from the punishment coming to them. Is it not laid up in store with Me, sealed up in My treasuries for the Day of Judgment?

And regarding this, the prophet said in Yeshayahu 10:3, And what will you do on the day of visitation? Go and learn how much Shmuel trembled from the fear of the Day of Judgment, as Chazal said in Chagigah 4b regarding the incident of the woman who conjured the dead.

הֲלֹא הוּא כְמוֹס עִמָּדִי וְגו'. פֶּרוּשׁ, הֵגֶם שֶׁבְּשִׁבִּיל כַּעַס אוֹיֵב נִמְנָעַתִּי מֵעֲשׂוֹת בָּהֶם מִשְׁפָּט הַמִּתְחַיֵּב לָהֶם עַל מַעֲשֵׂיהֶם, לֹא מִפְּנֵי זֶה יִפְטְרוּ מֵעֲנֹשׁ הַמִּגִּיעַ לָהֶם, הֲלֹא הוּא כְמוֹס עִמָּדִי חֲתֹם בְּאוֹצְרוֹתַי לְיוֹם הַדִּין.

Hashem repeated the idea by saying both laid up in store with Me and sealed up in My treasuries. This follows the path of what is written in Shemos 34:7, He bears iniquity, meaning He carries and delays the sin. But when it reaches the point where He says, as in Yeschayahu 1:14, I am weary of bearing them, He seals the sin in the treasuries. He Himself will then take vengeance on the evildoers by bringing out the sun from its sheath, as Chazal taught in Nedarim 8b, and the day of Hashem will burn them up. This is the meaning of the next verse, Vengeance is Mine, meaning that He Himself, as it were, will take vengeance.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:36:1

For Hashem will judge His people, and so on. After the Torah finished describing the matter of those who anger Hashem, tracing their path all the way to their ultimate end, it returns to offer a comforting promise to the collective whole of Israel, assuring them that He will not contend with them forever.

The meaning of "For Hashem will judge His people" is that He will bring to trial and weigh the cups of poison and suffering that they have already passed through. He will look upon the troubles that have passed over the righteous, some of whom were killed, some burned, and some flayed. For the sake of these righteous ones who suffered so deeply, He will relent. This is what is meant by "And relent for His servants", meaning, for their sake He will relent and say, "The troubles of the exile are already enough."

Furthermore, He will relent when Hashem sees that Israel has no strength left to rescue themselves from the exile, and the righteous no longer have the power to chastise those who anger Hashem with a rod of moral instruction. Additionally, there will no longer remain among Israel great men, prophets, seers, or possessors of the divine inspiration, such that "there is no cluster of grapes to eat," as in Micah 7:1. This is the meaning of "When He sees that their strength is gone" (literally, "the hand is gone").

And because of this, "there is no one to restrain them" (atzur). This is explained in the sense of First Samuel 9:17, "this one shall rule (ya'atzor) over My people", meaning, there is no power left in the leaders who guide the people in the ways of Hashem to direct them. And "abandoned" (v'azuv), meaning, because of this lack of leadership, the common people are left abandoned to their own devices.

He will also see that their strength is gone. Israel then makes the plea described in the preceding pasuk, and Hashem responds concerning those who ate the fat of their sacrifices: let them arise. The people will recognize that these supposed recipients of their offerings cannot help or save. They will recognize that Hashem alone saves, leading to the concluding declaration, See now that I, I am He.

Regarding the words, "Let them rise up and help you, let him be your protection": This addresses two types of idolaters. There is one who worships an idol as an absolute god, and there is another who worships an idol merely as an intermediary. Hashem forbade both types of worship, as we explained in its place on the verse, "You shall not make for yourself a carved image..." (Exodus 20:4). Therefore, corresponding to the one who worships an idol as an intermediary, the verse says, "Let them rise up and help you", meaning a simple assist, since they made the idol for this purpose, to help mediate between themselves and the Hashem, Master of the world. Corresponding to the one who worships an idol as an absolute god, the verse says, "Let him be your protection," as they look to it for ultimate shelter.

בְּפִשְׁטוּת · In plain words

The Ohr HaChaim explains that this verse is Hashem's rhetorical response to Israel's desperate cry in exile. By challenging the false gods to rise up and help, Hashem prompts a realization that these idols are completely powerless. This sets the stage for Israel to recognize Hashem as the sole Savior. The two phrases of assistance in the verse correspond to two types of idolatry: those who view idols as mere intermediaries (who seek a helping hand) and those who view them as absolute deities (who seek ultimate shelter).

לְמַעַשֶׂה · Lemaaseh

Distinguish the two errors the commentary identifies. Worship of an idol is not made acceptable by calling it an intermediary rather than an independent deity. Keep this distinction clear when learning the two phrases let them help you and let it be your shelter.

רְאוּ עַתָּה כִּי אֲנִי הוּא וְאֵין אֱלֹהִים עִמָּדִי אֲנִי אֶמֶת וְאֶחָדָה מִחַצְתִּי וְאֲנִי אֶרְפָּא וְאֵין מִדִּי מַצִּיל:

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:39:1

The Torah repeats the word "I" twice, saying "I, even I, am He." This corresponds to the two errors of idolatry that we alluded to in the previous verse. To address the first error, He says "I", meaning, and not any other being whom you mistakenly think is a complete god. To address the second error, where people make an idol to serve as an intermediary, He says "I am He", meaning, I alone. He then concludes by saying, "and there is no god with Me," meaning there is no intermediary between Me and the created beings.

רְאוּ עַתָּה כִּי אֲנִי הוּא וְאֵין אֱלֹהִים עִמָּדִי. כָּפַל לומר שְׁתֵּי פְעָמִים "אֲנִי אֲנִי" כְּנֶגֶד שְׁתֵּי טְעוּת שֶׁל עֲבֹדָה זָרָה שֶׁרְמְזוּנוּ בַּפְּסוּק שֶׁלִּפְנֵי זֶה, לָזֶה אָמַר "אֲנִי" – פְּרוּשׁ וְלֹא אַחֵר שֶׁאַתָּם חוֹשְׁבִים בּוֹ לְאֵלֹהֶם גָּמוּר, וְכֶנֶגֶד עֲבֹדָה זָרָה שֶׁעוֹשִׂים לְאַמְצָעִי אָמַר "אֲנִי הוּא" – פְּרוּשׁ לְבָדִי, וְגָמַר אוֹמֵר "וְאֵין אֱלֹהִים עִמָּדִי" – אַמְצָעִי בֵּינִי לְבֵין הַנִּבְרָאִים.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:39:2

The verse continues, "I kill, and I make alive." This addresses the sect of those who say that the force behind bad occurrences is not the same force behind good occurrences, claiming instead that there are two distinct powers. To counter this, He says, "I kill, and I make alive." He adds that this is not only true regarding these major matters of life and death, but even regarding the specific details of painful events: "I have wounded, and I heal." Our Sages of blessed memory also expounded on this verse in tractate Pesachim 68a; one may look up their words there.

אֲנִי אֶמֶת וְאֶחָדָה. זֶה כְּנֶגֶד כַּת הָאוֹמְרִים שֶׁפּוֹעֵל הָרַע אֵינוֹ פּוֹעֵל הַטּוֹב וְשֶׁתִּי יְכוּלֹת יֵשׁ, לָזֶה אָמַר "אֲנִי אֶמֶת וְאֶחָדָה", וְלֹא בִּפְרָט זֶה בְּלִבָּד אֶלָּא אֶפְלוּ בִּפְרָטִי פָּעַלִי הָרַע "אֲנִי מִחַצְתִּי וְאֲנִי אֶרְפָּא". וְרַבּוֹתֵינוּ זְכוֹרֵנוֹם לְבִרְכָּה דְּרִשּׁוּ (פְּסָחִים סח.) יֵצֵן שָׁם דְּבָרֵיהֶם.

The verse concludes, "And there is none that can deliver out of My hand." This means that ultimately, all created beings will die. For this reason, the verse is precise in its phrasing, saying "and there is none out of My hand" rather than saying "and there is no savior from My hand."

The Ohr HaChaim explains that the double expression "I, even I" refutes two forms of idolatry: serving another entity as a primary god, and serving an intermediary. The statement "I kill, and I make alive; I have wounded, and I heal" refutes dualism by establishing that Hashem is the sole source of both good and bad, from life and death down to the details of illness and healing. Finally, "there is none that can deliver out of My hand" emphasizes the absolute mortality of all created beings under Hashem's ultimate authority.

לְמַעַשֶׂה · Lemaaseh

Notice how the same speaker says both I kill and I give life, and both I wound and I heal. The commentary asks us to recognize one Hashem behind these opposite experiences, rather than imagining separate divine powers for good and bad.

אור החיים הקדוש

AI-assisted explanatory translation

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:40:1

For I lift up My hand to heaven, and so on. This is an expression of an oath, meaning that Hashem swore by the lifting of His hands to sharpen His sword to take vengeance on His adversaries. This is what is meant by the next verse, If I whet My glittering sword, and so on. And the words, and My hand take hold on judgment, mean that He will strengthen and assert the attribute of strict justice.

כִּי אֶשָּׂא אֶל שָׁמַיִם וְגו'. פֶּרוּשׁ לְשׁוֹן שְׁבוּעָה, שֶׁנִּשְׁבַּע בְּנִשְׂאוֹת יָדָיו לְשַׁנֵּן חֶרְבוֹ לְנֶקֶם מֵצָרָיו, וְהוּא אָמַר "אִם שְׁנוֹתֵי בֶרֶק" וְגו', וְאָמַר "וְתִאֲחַז בְּמִשְׁפָּט" פֶּרוּשׁ יִתְקַף בְּמִדַּת הַדִּין.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:40:2

Alternatively, it means that even the attribute of mercy will agree and join in strengthening the judgment, to return vengeance to Hashem's adversaries, who are the enemies of Israel. For they do not hate us except because of our cleaving to Hashem. And when the verse says, and I will requite them that hate Me, it refers to the group of nations that actively try to force Israel to transgress their religion.

או יִרְצֶה, שֶׁתִּסָּכִים גַּם מִדַּת הַרַחֲמִים וְתִתְחַזֵּק בְּמִשְׁפָּט לְהַשִּׁיב נֶקֶם לְצָרֵי ה' שֶׁהֵם אוֹיְבֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל, שֶׁאֵינָם שׂוֹנְאִים אוֹתָנוּ אֲלָא עַל דְּבִקּוּתָנוּ בָּהֶם, וְאָמַר "וְלִמְשָׁנָא" – הֵם כֵּת הַמַּעֲבֵרֶת יִשְׂרָאֵל עַל דָּת.

בְּפִשְׁטוּת · In plain words

The Ohr HaChaim explains that Hashem's lifting of His hand to heaven is a solemn oath to execute strict justice and take vengeance on His adversaries. He offers two interpretations of how this judgment is held: first, as a direct assertion of the attribute of strict justice; second, as a unified judgment where even the attribute of mercy agrees to punish the enemies of Israel, since their hatred of Israel stems solely from Israel's devotion to Hashem.

לְמַעַשֶׂה · Lemaaseh

When we face challenges or hostility from those who oppose our devotion to Torah, we can find comfort in knowing that our connection to Hashem is the very reason we are targeted. Hashem views animosity toward His nation as animosity toward Himself, and He ultimately acts to defend His people and uphold justice.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:43:1

Sing aloud, O nations, of His people. The meaning is that when Hashem executes vengeance upon the enemies of Israel and elevates the spiritual and physical stature of Israel, the nations of the world will sing praises concerning His people, Israel, to laud them and exalt them. This is in line with the verse in Psalms 144:15, Praiseworthy is the people for whom it is so.

הִרְנִינוּ גוֹיִם וְגו'. פִּירוּשׁ, כִּי בַעֲשׂוֹת ה' נִקְמָה בְּאֹיְבֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל וִירוּמָם מִדְּרַגַּת יִשְׂרָאֵל, יִרְנְנוּ הַגּוֹיִם עַל עֲמֹ יִשְׂרָאֵל לְשִׁבְחָם וְלִירוּמָמָם, כְּאָמְרוֹ (תהלים קמד:טו) "אֲשֶׁר הָעָם" וְגו'.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:43:2

For He avenges the blood of His servants. When the verse says, For He avenges the blood... and He will render vengeance to His adversaries, it means that Hashem will not only avenge the actual spilled blood, but He will also return upon His adversaries the very vengeance and harm they plotted to do to Israel. This is in line with the verse in Psalms 7:17, His mischief shall return upon his own head.

כִּי דַם עֲבָדָיו יִקּוּם. וְאָמְרוּ "כִּי דַם וְגו' וְנָקָם" וְגו' - פִּירוּשׁ, שֶׁלֹא דַם לְבַד, אֲלָא גַם צָרָיו אֲשֶׁר חָרְשׁוּ אָנֹן לוֹ יֵשִׁיב ה' לָהֶם נָקָם שֶׁחָשְׁבוּ לַעֲשׂוֹת, עַל דֶּרֶךְ אָמְרוֹ (תהלים ז:יז) "יָשׁוּב עִמָּלוֹ בְּרָאשׁוֹ".

And He makes expiation for the land of His people. This statement, And He makes expiation for the land of His people, is the ultimate conclusion of the theme that began earlier in verse 36, For Hashem will judge His people. The Torah concludes here by declaring that whatever sins might still remain upon Israel will be fully atoned for by the very land of Israel itself, which suffered by being desolate and a disgrace for so many years. The suffering of the land will serve as the expiation for the iniquity of Hashem's people.

The Ohr HaChaim explains that when Hashem ultimately redeems Israel and punishes their enemies, the nations of the world will sing the praises of the Jewish people. Hashem will avenge not only the physical blood spilled by the nations, but also the evil plots they devised. Finally, the long, painful desolation of the Land of Israel during the exile will itself serve as a complete atonement for any remaining sins of the nation.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:44:1

He, and Hoshea the son of Nun: This means that Yehoshua was standing there with Moshe, but the actual speaking was done by Moshe alone, as the verse says, "And he spoke" in the singular. Similarly, Hashem had said to Moshe in the singular, "And teach it to the children of Israel, put it in their mouth" (Deuteronomy 31:19), referring to Moshe alone.

Regarding the text writing "and Hoshea" rather than "and Yehoshua" as Moshe had renamed him, this is because the addition of the letter yud was for honor and greatness, as hinted in the verse, "And Moshe called Hoshea the son of Nun, Yehoshua" (Numbers 13:16). However, here, when the verse placed them together and said, "he and Hoshea the son of Nun," the Torah removed the yud to show humility in the presence of his master Moshe, in the spirit of the verse, "Should the axe boast itself against him that hews therewith?" (Isaiah 10:15).

AI-assisted explanatory translation

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:50:1

And die on the mount: This means, willingly accept and consent to die. For Hashem does not take the souls of His pious ones except with their own consent. And when He says, and be gathered unto your people, this is in line with what Chazal say in Ketubot 104a, that the righteous go out to welcome a newly arriving righteous soul. For this reason, Hashem said to him that he would be gathered to his people who are coming out to meet him.

ומת בהר. פרוש, התרצה למוות, שאין הקדוש ברוך הוא לוקח נפשות חסידיו אלא לרצונם. ואמרו "והאסף אל עמך" על דרך אמרם (כתובות קד.) שיוצאים הצדיקים להקביל פני צדיק, ולזה אמר ה' אליו ש"אסף אל עמיו הפאים לקראתו.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:50:2

Alternatively, the verse can be explained in this way: it comes to provide three reasons for the death of the man of Hashem. This is the structure of the verse: And die, and the reason it must be on the mount is in line with what Chazal say in Sotah 14a. Why was Moshe buried on Mount Nebo? It was because of the sin of Peor. For whenever Peor attempts to raise its head to accuse, it finds Moshe opposite it and is subdued. This is as the verse says in Deuteronomy 34:6, And He buried him in the valley... over against Beth-peor.

עוד יתבאר על זה הדרך, כי בא לתת שלשה טעמים למיתת איש האלהים. וזה שעור הכתוב "ומת", והטעם "בהר" – פרוש על דרך אמרם זכרונם לברכה (סוטה יד.) למה נקבר משה בהר נבו, בשביל עון פעור, כי בכל זמן שזקף ראשו פעור ימצא כנגדו משה ונכנע, וכאמרו (דברים לד, ו) "ויקבר אתו בגיא מול בית פעור".

The second reason is: where you are ascending. This means, so that he can attain the sublime spiritual bliss that he earned through his awesome good deeds. He cannot attain this level while still joined with the physical body, which is unable to experience that high spiritual state. This is what is meant by where you are ascending, referring to the upper world.

The third reason is: and be gathered unto your people. This is in line with what Chazal say in Bemidbar Rabbah 19 on the verse in Deuteronomy 33:21, And he came with the heads of the people... This teaches that through the merit of Moshe, the generation of the wilderness will merit the World to Come. They are associated with him, as Hashem said to him in Exodus 32:7, Go down; for your people... have dealt corruptly. Thus, the verse says, and be gathered unto, meaning for the sake of your people, to bring them into the World to Come. And even though we find that the Torah says the same regarding Aaron in Numbers 20:24, and was gathered unto his people, wherever the text leaves room for an interpretation, we expound it. (The printed reference in the supplied Hebrew is inconsistent; the corresponding phrase about Aharon appears in Numbers 20:24.)

בפשטות · In plain words

The Ohr HaChaim first reads the command as Moshe consenting to his passing, with righteous souls coming to welcome him. He then offers another interpretation with three reasons: his burial counters Peor, departure from the body allows him to attain the spiritual height earned by his deeds, and his passing serves his people by bringing the generation of the wilderness into the World to Come.

למעשה · Lemaaseh

Reflect on the responsibility for others shown in the third explanation: Moshe remains connected to the generation entrusted to him. Think of one person whose spiritual growth you can support with care and patience.

Deuteronomy 32:51

עַל־אֲשֶׁר מַעַלְתֶּם בִּי בְּתוֹךְ בְּנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל בְּמִי-מְרִיבַת קִדְשׁ מִדְבָּר-

Because ye trespassed against Me in the midst of the children of Israel at the waters of Meribath-kadesh, in the wilderness of Zin; because ye sanctified Me not in the midst of the children of Israel.

The Ohr HaChaim directs the reader to his extensive commentary in Parashat Chukat regarding the sin of Moshe and Aaron at the waters of Merivah, where the nature of their trespass and the failure to sanctify Hashem's name are analyzed in detail.

When studying complex or sensitive Torah topics, we should look back at foundational explanations we have already learned to gain a deeper, more consistent understanding of the text.

כִּי מֵנִגַּד תִּרְאֶה אֶת-הָאָרֶץ וְשָׁמָּה לֹא תָבוֹא אֶל-הָאָרֶץ אֲשֶׁר- אֲנִי נֹתֵן לְבְנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל: (פ)

For thou shalt see the land afar off; but thou shalt not go thither into the land which I give the children of Israel.'

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:52:1

For you shall see the land from afar, etc. This is explained in the manner of the verse (Deuteronomy 34:1), "And Hashem showed him all the land." See what I have written there.

כִּי מֵנִגַּד תִּרְאֶה וְגו'. פֶּרוּשׁ עַל דֶּרֶךְ אֶמְרוּ (דברים ל"ד:א) "וַיִּרְאֶה ה' אֶת כָּל הָאָרֶץ", וְעַיִן מַה שֶּׁפִּירְשְׁתִּי שָׁם.

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:52:2

But you shall not go there into the land, etc. This presents a difficulty: after the verse already stated, "but you shall not go there," what room is there to repeat and say, "into the land, etc."? This seems redundant.

וְשָׁמָּה לֹא תָבוֹא אֶל הָאָרֶץ וְגו'. קִשָּׁה, אַחֵר שֶׁאָמַר "וְשָׁמָּה לֹא תָבוֹא", מַה מְקוֹם לְחִזּוֹר וְלִזְמֹר "אֶל הָאָרֶץ" וְגו'?

The explanation is in light of what Chazal have said (Deuteronomy Rabbah 2:9) that Moshe is destined to enter the Land of Israel with the Patriarchs in the future to come. Furthermore, it is stated in the Zohar (Part 2, 120a) that he will lead the Jewish people into the Land when their final redemption arrives.

וַיִּתְּבֹאֵר עַל דֶּרֶךְ אֶמְרוּם וְכִרּוֹנָם לְבָרְכָה (דברים רבה ב, ט) שֶׁעֲתִיד מֹשֶׁה לְכַנֵּס לְאָרֶץ עִם הָאֲבוֹת לְעֲתִיד לָבֵא, וְאָמְרוּ בְּיָהֳרָ (חלק ב קכ.) כִּי הוּא יָבִיא אֶת יִשְׂרָאֵל אֶל הָאָרֶץ בְּבֵא גָאֵלָתָם.

Therefore, when Hashem said, "but you shall not go there," He was concerned that the words might be understood as an absolute, permanent decree preventing him from entering the Land for all eternity. To clarify this, Hashem added, "into the land which I give (to the children of Israel)" meaning: you shall not enter it now, during this current giving, but this does not exclude the entry that will take place in the future. See also what I have written on the verse (Deuteronomy 3:25), "Let me go over, I pray You."

וְלֹא כִשְׁאָמַר ה' "וְשָׁמָּה לֹא תָבוֹא" חָשׂ
שִׂיחֵיו הַדְּבָרִים נִשְׁמָעִים שְׁמַח לִיט לֹא בִיָּאת
הָאָרֶץ לְעוֹלָם וָעֶד, לֹא אָמַר "אֶל הָאָרֶץ
אֲשֶׁר אֲנִי נֹתֵן" וְגו' פָּרוּשׁ, עֲתָה, וְלֹא אֶל
אֲשֶׁר יִתֵּן לְעֵתִיד. וְעֵין מַה שֶּׁפָּרְשְׁתִּי בַּפָּסוּק
(דְּבָרִים ג', כה) "אֶעֱבְרָה נָא".

Or HaChaim on Deuteronomy 32:52:3

This concludes Parashat Haazinu.

חסלת פרשת האזינו

Original Ohr HaChaim Hebrew on Sefaria

AI-assisted study aids · Deuteronomy 32:52

בפשוט · In plain words

The Ohr HaChaim explains that the seemingly redundant phrasing "but you shall not go there into the land which I give" is actually a precise limitation. It clarifies that Moshe's ban from entering the Land of Israel applies only to the immediate conquest and distribution of his generation. It does not represent an eternal ban, leaving open the fulfillment of the prophetic tradition that Moshe will ultimately enter the Land with the Jewish people at the time of the future redemption.

למעשה · Lemaaseh

Read the limits of a difficult statement carefully. Here the words which I give distinguish Moshe's present restriction from the future entry described by Chazal, so the restriction should not be read more broadly than the commentary explains.
